MY CHILDHOOD'S HOME.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Where'er I turn my weary feet,
Wherever I may roam,
Remembrances steal o'er my heart
Of home—my childhood's home.
Long years have passed, and I have sailed
On many a wild wide sea,
And traveled many a foreign clime,
But still they cling to me.

A little leaky ten foot hut—
I see it now so clear—.....
The rent, I think my mother said,
Was twenty slugs a year;
And I, a little puny chap,
With trowsers to my knees—
In winter had an awful time
A-trying not to freeze.

And many and many a time have I
Gone supper-less to bed;
A good square meal I never had,
'Twas ot'ner crust of bread.
'Twas "Jim! do this," and "Jim! go there"—
Despite my tears and groans;
No wonder I am now, as then,
Nothing but skin and bones.

I never, never shall forget
My mother's awful whacks—
(Others may tell how good they were,
I only deal in facts.)
And it does not seem a week ago
When, on that rainy day,
I tied my t'other shirt in a bag—
And gladly ran away!

I've never seen it since but once—
And I have no desire;
In fact, (between us,) I went back
And set the house on fire.
But, as I said before, where'er
My weary footsteps roam,
I can't forget those gloomy days
Within my childhood's home. J. H. B.

THE DEAD BRIDE;

OR,

THE THREE THROWS OF THE DICE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY P. H. MARCELLUS.

One lovely autumn afternoon, a few months after the close of our late civil war, Robert Arundel and myself strolled into Warne's pistol gallery on Fayette street, in Baltimore.

Let me pause a moment, to take a brief retrospective view.

Rob and I had been chums at college. I not only loved him as a brother, but looked up to him with a feeling akin to reverence. His mental and physical superiority over the rest of the students was unquestioned; he outstripped all in his studies, was exceedingly handsome, and the best rider, shot and swimmer for miles around. At the same time, his amiability, liveliness and generosity disarmed all envy. Not long after the breaking out of the rebellion, Rob, although a native of southern Maryland, which was intense in its sympathy with the cause of the Confederacy, entered the ranks of the Union army. I did not see him again until about a month previous to the time at which this story opens. Heavens! what a change. Pale, haggard, gloomy and taciturn, he was scarcely the shadow of his former self. All his old blitheness of spirits was gone, and occasional fits of abstraction, during which he gnashed his teeth and muttered unintelligibly, almost made me fear for his sanity. I must not forget to mention that he had a long, hideous purple scar above his right temple, in regard to the origin of which I asked him on one occasion, but he evaded the inquiry. In fact, he avoided, as much as possible, all conversation relating to the great conflict which had recently terminated. I understood, however, from a remark which he once inadvertently dropped, that he was still suffering from the effects of this wound internally, although it was apparently healed. But in spite of Rob's surprising alteration, he was to me the same true and affectionate friend as of yore, and we saw each other every day.

To resume.

At the shooting stand were grouped some six or eight gentlemen, one of whom alone, whose back was turned to us, was firing. At every discharge the bullet struck the centre of the target with unerring accuracy. Arm'd while the marksman playfully addressed his admiring companions:—

"Three bottles of champagne I hit the bull's eye every shot in twelve!"

No one, however, seemed disposed to take the proffered bet.

"Very well then," he continued—"I will try it for my own amusement."

Eleven times in succession he struck the centre. The twelfth time he missed. With an oath, but at the same time smiling, he turned. I now recognized in him a slight acquaintance, and we saluted each other. Then, glancing casually at Arundel, I was amazed to find his eyes riveted with an indescribably wild expression upon the countenance of the marksman. Clutching my arm convulsively, he whispered:—

"Come, George, let us leave this place at once, or I shall choke!"

Silently I followed him into the street. Suddenly he inquired—

"Who is that—that man, to whom you spoke?"

"That is Major Beverly, formerly of the Confederate army. He is a Virginian, but came to Baltimore a short time ago and is now doing business here. Why do you ask, Rob?"

"You shall know all when we arrive at my lodgings. Now let me collect my thoughts."

My friend seemed to be laboring under some great excitement, which, by the time we reached his room, had increased to such a high pitch, as also remarked from the region of the scar on his forehead was swollen and inflamed. Saturating a towel with cold water, he applied it to his brow, saying, in a low, trembling voice:—

"The wound burns into my inmost brain; we had no surgeon in camp. Annie did the best she could, but her love was not sufficient to ——"

It was the first time I heard him mention that name.

Instantly the inflammation became allayed, and, casting himself languidly upon his bed, he began:—

"We had fought a victorious battle in the valley of Virginia, in which I received this wound. My company was dispatched to an isolated post, and encamped on the farm of a gentleman who was well known for his union proclivities. I, the nearly dying captain, was taken into the house and tenderly nursed by the loyalist's daughter. I will spare you the details of our passionate love's awakening. One day, just as I was growing convalescent, we were attacked by a large band of guerrillas. Nearly all of my command were killed, wounded or captured; the old loyalist was shot down before my eyes, and his mansion set in flames. I succeeded in securing a couple of horses, which Annie and I mounted, and away we sped like the wind. The poor girl had no one now in the world but me. We determined to do our best to reach the federal lines. We had ridden several hours through a thicket, when suddenly a loud "halt!" arrested us. Looking up, I beheld a confederate officer on horseback but a few paces ahead of us, with revolver leveled. A short distance to the right was a small encampment of soldiers of the same stripe. We were lost. Silently and secretly, however, I grasped my revolver. 'You are my prisoner,' said the officer to me. 'Ride at once into yonder camp; in the meantime I will speak to the lady.' 'She is my betrothed, and shall not be parted from me,' I replied. 'Obey, you dog; I tell you I will take care of the lady!' The expression of his face was murderous. We were now very close. Quicker than thought I spurred my horse upon his, and dealing him a terrible blow upon the arm, sent his weapon spinning to the ground. My little girl and I darted off like arrows. A score of rebels were at once at our heels; the officer, who had dismounted, regained his pistol and remounted, being in the van. Turning to look back, I saw, to my infinite relief, that we were drawing away from them; but I also saw the officer level his revolver."

Robert paused and pressed his hand to his temple. "I cannot bear the memory. Quick, George, some water, or I faint!"

I changed the cloth on his forehead and gave him some cool water to drink. In a few minutes he resumed.

"Girl as Annie's form quivered in death, but I thought nothing of it at the moment—on we sped at a mad gallop, and ere long our pursuers were out of sight. All at once, turning to Annie, I saw that her face was pale as marble, and her back covered with blood. Horrified, I clasped her in my arms. I embraced a corpse! That villain's bullet had struck and killed her!" Arundel almost screamed with rage and agony. After a while he continued mournfully:—"I have less than an hour thereafter I arrived within our lines with my burden, and on the following day interred my dead bride in a neighboring churchyard."

Robert sank back upon his couch overcome.

"Leave me now, please, dear George," he said, faintly, "and come to me again to-morrow morning early, I have something particular to talk over with you."

Going down the red river with Annie, but with whom I was acquainted, coming up. Stepping for a moment to converse with him, I learned that he had been treating Arundel for several weeks past. The wound in the head, he told me, was but imperfectly healed, and that a sudden shock, mental or physical, might produce death or insanity.

The next morning I called on Rob. He was dressed prepared for going out, and took a satchel in his hand.

"George," he said, "I want you to accompany me on a little jaunt into the country."

We left the house, entered a city car, and rode to Druid Hill. Here we got out, and strolled into the park. Thus far his remarks had been few and commonplace, but now he suddenly said:—

"George, that—that man you spoke to yesterday in the pistol gallery is the murderer of my Annie!" Just what I had suspected. "I would have known him again had an age elapsed. Since her death, my sole thought and purpose in life has been revenge. Nemesis has, at last, given the wretch into my hands. I was seized by an almost irresistible impulse, yesterday to kill him on the spot, but then I would have been as bad as he—a murderer. He shall have an equal chance—I will meet him face to face."

"In other words, you mean a duel."

"Precisely."

"Have you forgotten the terrible skill he displayed?"

"No, nor have I forgotten that once he missed his mark. When his eye meets that of the lover of the woman he murdered his nerve will be even less sure. George, you remember how I used to shoot in our college days; well, during the war I improved considerably. I am a dead shot and mean to kill that man."

We had arrived on the outskirts of the park, and entered a field beyond. Opening the satchel Rob produced a pistol and ammunition. He had come out here to make certain of his skill. We improvised a target, about a foot and a half in diameter, and he took his stand at twenty paces.

He fired. I approached the target, examined it, and found it—untouched!

Rob was incredulous, and came up to see for himself. His inspection confirmed the correctness of mine. Bewildered, he returned to his place and fired again, this time taking very careful aim. The result was the same as before. Six times he fired—the bullet never struck the board.

The situation had become painful. I suggested that he stand nearer the target, say at a dozen paces. He did so. His lips were pressed together convulsively, and his countenance was distorted and sallow as death. He fired again some eight or ten times, striking the target but once, and then near the outer edge.

I knew what was wrong. The two wounds, the one in the head the other in the heart, had completely shattered his nervous system. He was trembling like an aspen.

"Come, Rob," I finally said, "let us go; you are sick and weak."

He silently obeyed. He understood me. On our way back to the city he plunged into a deep and dark brooding. Arrived at his lodgings, there came to pass what I had anticipated. He was attacked by a fever. I sent for Dr. S——, who soon afterwards came and gave me directions for Arundel's treatment. I nursed my poor friend carefully throughout the afternoon and evening, and at last, overcome by weariness, went to sleep by his side.

The following morning Robert woke me. He was apparently quite well. But almost the first word he uttered showed how intensely he still nourished plans of revenge.

"What!" I exclaimed, "You still mean to——"

"Call me to a duel? Yes, but not a duel of the ordinary mode. There would be too great a disparity in the chances, and I do not intend to let him murder me as he did her. I hate and loathe that man, and mean that he shall die. The chances shall be perfectly equal, but Nemesis will strike him. I once heard of two mortal enemies, who drew life and death by lot. That is what I intend to do. The loser shoots himself through the head within a specified time."

"What!" I ejaculated, in horror. "Would you dare trifle thus monstrously with death and eternity?"

"I cannot help it. You know that, sooner or later, the conflict between us must come, one way or another. This plan suits me best of any."

"But if you should lose?"

"I have reflected over all that. I shall meet my fate unshrinking. Besides, I am tired of life. I long for the blessed moment when I shall be re-united to Annie."

I did all in my power to dissuade him from his fearful purpose, but in vain. The sophistries of a morbid mind, and the vindictiveness of an embittered, blighted heart, made him unyielding as a rock. I was inexpressibly distressed and shocked, but I could do nothing; I could not even remain passive in the affair. Much against my will I consented to be my friend's messenger to his enemy. A thought shot into my head to advise Major Beverly to fly, but a moment's reflection convinced me that he would not budge an inch from a threatened danger.

I called on the ex-Confederate officer, and was courteously received. He was a tall, athletic, and rather fine looking man, about thirty. A few words sufficed to explain the object of my visit.

"I do not remember," he said, astonished, looking at Arundel's card, "that I ever had the honor of meeting the gentleman."

"It was about a year ago, I think, in the valley of Virginia. Captain Arundel and a lady, his betrothed, were flying your pursuit."

He started perceptibly and said, "True, I now remember meeting an escaping Federal officer and a female."

"Perhaps you also remember sending a bullet after them; that bullet killed my friend's mistress."

He gazed at me in consternation, the card falling from his hand, and stammered:—

"God is my witness, I did not know that."

"So I had hoped. Your reply to the cartel?"

For several minutes Beverly strode hurriedly up and down the room, evidently in a conflicting and anguished state of mind. "I can conceive your friend's bitterness," he finally said, "but think it strange to be called to account in private life, during time of peace, for a bullet fired in war."

"I was not aware that you and your comrades warred against women."

"The shot was intended for the escaping prisoner who had assaulted me."

"And killed a poor, defenceless girl, not to speak of blasting the life of as noble a man as ever breathed. Now, do you intend to give my friend satisfaction?"

"Well, then, in Heaven's name, yes! Weapons, pistols."

"Agreed. But in view of your perfect marksmanship, and my friend's utter inability to handle the weapon, he proposes a combat somewhat out of the common order."

I then explained the nature of the duel proposed. Beverly was fearfully startled and agitated, and for a while remonstrated against the unusual and appalling terms. I would have taunted him, but saw how deeply the consciousness of his having killed poor Annie distressed and stupefied him. I could not help pitying the man. Finally he acquiesced in the terms.

"Come to Captain Arundel's lodgings to-morrow evening, at seven," said I. "Remember, the loser fulfils his pledge within the space of one week."

"Be it so. There will be no need of seconds; you may make all arrangements. And tell your friend, that if there is anything in all my life that I regret and lament, it is that unholy, but, as God knows, unintended shot."

"I shall do so. Adieu."

Until the time of meeting, on the following day, I lived and moved as if enveloped by some horrid dream. Here I was negotiating for a death as if it were a mere business transaction. I cannot help now thinking that my mind must have been diseased at that time, by the weird and terrible strangeness of my experience.

At six o'clock I was with Rob. He appeared melancholy, but calm and resigned, and conversed abstractedly upon ordinary topics. The time was getting heavy and long for me. I picked up a sheet of note paper and tore it into several strips.

"What are you doing?" asked Rob.

"Making lots."

"Throw them away. Every possible appearance of unfair pre-arrangement must be avoided."

Thereupon sounded a rap at the door, and the next moment Major Beverly entered. Eagerly and curiously he scanned the features of his implacable foe.

Nothing could describe the play of Robert's countenance. Not hate or rage was depicted therein, but utter annihilation. His unconcealed passion gave the vantage to his enemy, who smiled disdainfully, and, half turning his back to Robert, bowed to me. Some measured and artificial sentences were exchanged between us, and I inquired of him whether he had any particular mode of casting or drawing lots to suggest.

"I think dice will do," he said, after reflecting a moment.

I called a servant into the room, and, giving him some money, sent him to a neighboring shop to purchase the dice. The five minutes that elapsed before his return, during which not a word was spoken, seemed an age to me. At last I heard him coming up the stairs. I went to the door, and, with a peculiar sensation of loathing, took from him the tiny arbitors of life and death.

"I suggest," said I, "that each make three throws; the lowest two indicate the loser."

Arundel and Beverly nodded a dumb acquiescence. Both moved their chairs nearer to the table. I put the three dice into a cup, and handed it to the latter, saying:—

"Will you begin, Major Beverly?"

He seized the cup, his hand trembling but little, and made the first throw.

Six, four and two—total, twelve. Not a bad throw.

Now came Robert's turn. He grasped the cup convulsively, and brought it rather violently down upon the table.

Six, four and three—in all, thirteen.

To my astonishment, the countenances of the two adversaries expressed the same emotion—disappointment and disquietude. It was natural in the Major, but I could not account for it in my friend.

Beverly again seized the cup, and threw a second time. The result was a five, a two and a one—total, eight.

I breathed more lightly. Robert gloomily took the cup and cast the dice. Five, one and one—total, seven.

Again the looks of both men evinced a similar feeling over the result—serenity and satisfaction. What was it to make of it?

Major Beverly, before throwing for the third and last time, paused to collect himself; in vain, he could not master his emotion. With a quivering hand he turned the cup down upon the table.

Two, two and two—total, six.

I was almost buoyed into the air by my lightness of heart. Beverly sank into his chair with a despairing look. Robert started, and the gloom upon his countenance deepened. His manner was painfully inexplicable to me.

As Arundel raised the cup for the deciding cast, the death-like stillness of suspense was almost suffocating. All three now bent eagerly forward. Robert paused fully half a minute before he threw.

One, one and one—total, three!

Robert Arundel had lost, and was now pledged to become a suicide! But what meant this? A ray of beatitude and bliss seemed to illuminate his countenance. Suddenly a light dawned upon my mind—I began to comprehend his strangeness of manner; within the last few minutes he had ceased to desire that man's death, and longed but for his own. He yearned to be re-united in the spirit world to his lost, idolized love.

When Major Beverly realized the result of the last cast of the dice, he drew a long, deep inspiration. He was saved; but he did not exult in his adversary's doom. Slowly he rose from the chair, and silently, as if endeavoring to recover from a state of stupefaction, moved towards the door. I accompanied him thither, and, with compressed lips, said:—

"Within seven days, Major Beverly, my friend will have fulfilled his pledge."

Shuddering, and without making any reply, he staggered down the stairs. Returning into the apartment, I was clasped in Robert's arms.

"My good, kind friend," he said tenderly, "how can I ever return your self-sacrificing affection, or make amends for the distress you have suffered through me?"

Overcome by emotion, I was powerless to speak. Suddenly, he continued:—

"George, as I sat there a few minutes ago, brooding over my vengeance, what do you think I saw? She—Annie appeared before me, in a halo of ethereal loveliness, and beckoned to me. Then I forgot all about that man, and thought only of her, of meeting her again." A quiver passed through his frame, and his eyes began to sparkle strangely, unnaturally, and stare into vacancy. "Look!" he whispered, in quick, agitated tones—"There she is again—she beckons, she calls to me—I must join her, George—I——"

His form was trembling and tottering. In great alarm I led him to the sofa, and applied a wet cloth to his head. Calling in a servant, I almost shrieked to him to go for Dr. S——. In fifteen minutes he entered. The physician entered. In the interim, Arundel had been breathing heavily and muttering incoherently.

Dr. S—— shook his head ominously, and said:—

"It is the old wound again; I fear he will never entirely recover from its effects."

We put him to bed and the doctor did everything in his power for him, but with little avail; Arundel was entirely out of his mind, and was attacked by several fearful paroxysms.

At a late hour of the night Dr. S—— said to me:—

"You are very much in need of rest, and had better go home now and retire. I will remain with your friend through the night."

In truth I was utterly prostrated. I went home, and to bed, and sank into a profound, dreamless sleep.

The next morning, shortly after rising, a note, with the words "in haste" beside the superscription, was delivered to me. Quickly tearing it open, I read—

"I absolve Captain Arundel from his pledge, and beseech him not to add the weight of another life upon my deeply afflicted soul. CHARLES BEVERLY.

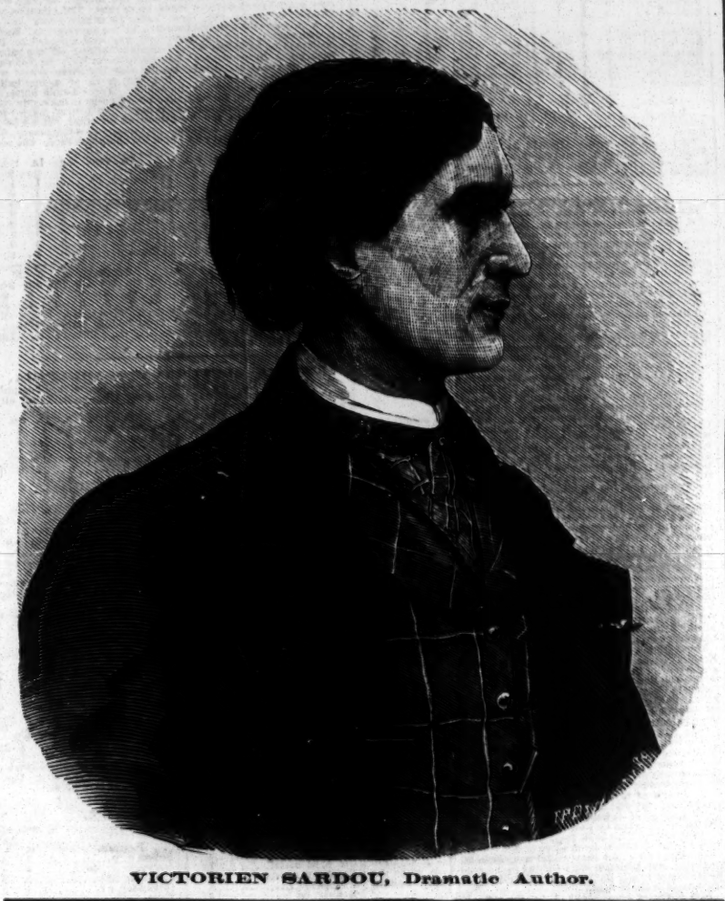
I flew to Arundel's lodgings.

Dr. S—— was standing at the bedside silently contemplating Robert's countenance. When I caught sight of it I stood like one petrified.

"I had anticipated it," said Dr. S——, in a low voice, "but did not think that it would happen so soon. His system must recently have received some severe shock, which hastened the crisis. Ten minutes ago he breathed his last in my arms."

Death had thus already absolved my poor friend from his terrible pledge. Free from the stain of self murder, his soul had taken its departure to be united through eternity with that of his beloved Annie.

This is all I have to relate. Several weeks since I heard of Major Beverly's decease. Thus I felt released from my self-imposed silence in regard to this tragic history.



VICTORIEN SARDOU, Dramatic Author.

JUGGERNAUT.

Festivities and Supposed Immolations.

Advices received from Calcutta, E. Indies, on July 16th, report a sad ending this year to the Juggernaut Festival at Serampore. There are three great days of the festival, which extends over a fortnight, and is filled up in the main with amusements. The first day is devoted to bathing the god in the holy Ganges water. Next his huge car is drawn out from his temple to that of a brother god whom Juggernaut is supposed to visit yearly and remain with a week. There are now two cars in Serampore; the large original one, 30 feet high, and a smaller, which has been set up as a rival. The large car this year was moved triumphantly and taken to the appointed place; the smaller one could not be moved, probably because the greater part of the people were at the larger. July 15th was the return day, and in the evening the large car was again drawn successfully, watched by the station magistrate and a few police of the place. The smaller car, unfortunately, was deemed by the authorities a fixture, and, in any case, was in the place where it was wanted. Each car has four strong ropes attached, one at each front angle and two inside. At these ropes as many as a thousand people pull at one time, and, as the great object with every one is to touch the rope, and one person gives way to another, many thousand are privileged to pull the god during his journey. On this last day of the festival one more attempt was resolved upon for the purpose of making the smaller car to, at least, move, and, unhappily, the attempt was successful, and in a moment two of the men nearest the car were under the wheels. One was literally cut in two (the other's thigh was crushed nearly off, and there is little hope of his recovery. At first the report went abroad that the disasters were cases of self-immolation, but this was not so. They were pure accidents, arising from the pressure and excitement of the crowd when the car moved. The civil surgeon of the station states that the wounded man, for a long time after being taken to the hospital, called loudly on the god, "What have I done that you should punish me?" and he asked for and drank gin, so that he could not be a fit subject for a Hindoo sacrifice. The deputy magistrate also reported that there was nothing in it at all like self-immolation. This kind of death is fast on the decrease and is not likely to ever be again of any magnitude. There would seldom be either a suicide or an accident at the Juggernaut Festival if a strong body of police was posted at the car. On the above occasion only a few police of the station were engaged—a mere handful among thousands upon thousands, a mass of life for miles of the roads and fields.

NO BATHING AT THE SHORE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY OLIVER SPARKLE.

Old Scorch has got a broken back, the cities 'gin to swarm;
And people now complain of cold and take a glass to warm.
The summer drone has left the beach and lone the breakers roar;
And Neptune cries from out the deep, no bathing at the shore.

The charming miss, and mamma's face, are angry to be sure.
For Broadway fops and swells, you know, they never could endure.
The cool resort was just the place to trap that Mr. Nore;
But now, alas! that's all played out—no bathing at the shore.

The boarding-houses and hotels, too, a solemn grandeur wear;
For life's no longer in demand, the landlord jobbing there.
With folded arms and sour looks Old Hash stands in the door.
And 'gins to think of closing up—no bathing at the shore.

O wondrous change in days so fair, no longer sweat and swear:
But pay your bill, and ply your skill, and drive away dull care;
For outward bound the empty trains attest the season's o'er,
The whistle screams along the way—no bathing at the shore.

POPULAR LECTURERS.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY DR. JOHN HOLMES.

A phase of the show business which has assumed quite extensive proportions within the last five years, is that which is called lecturing. A rose by any other name would smell as sweet, and the lectures which draw the largest crowds in all our towns and cities are far from being the sort of mental pabulum which was doled out to us by our professors when we were studying medicine in our younger days. If that was dry, it was at least learned; but the popular lecture of to-day is minus the dryness, it must be confessed, if it is also minus the learning. And just in proportion (we are sorry to say) as they leave dryness behind, they leave learning behind too.

Nobody would expect, for example, to be very much edified by one of John B. Gough's moral minstrel performances, or one of Miss Olive Logan's (with all respect to the lady be it said) fireworky farandoies; yet every hall proprietor who has placed his faith in lecturers during his ambitious career, knows that the strongest cards for drawing purposes are the gymnastic Gough and the lively Logan. It is true, Gough has always a basis of schoolmastery information of the "Be virtuous and be happy sort"—at the bottom of the edifice of anecdote, grimace and death on a white horse eloquence that he calls a lecture, and ever since Olive gives her hearers homeopathic doses of practical ethics in the midst of her dramatic delineations and her funny quips and quirks and stories. But if you ever saw a boy after he had been listening to either of these speakers, you found that he had very little to tell about the ethics, and a good deal about the jokes. It is an old saying, that you can always tell, in a country village, when the circus has been along, by the way the boys stand on their heads and turn cart-wheels in their hours of ease, and in like manner the youngsters may be known to have been to hear Olive Logan or Gough by their proneness to tell stories and make mugs.

Another style of popular lecturer is the Emersonian style—the Whippies, the Justin Macarthys, and the Professor Youmans. These men generally have something to say that is worth an auditor's while to hear; but they don't "draw" worth a cent, and it is in the lecture business as it is in the theatrical world, say what you will, the most amusing entertainment is the one that pays best, the country over.

The lecture system flourishes best in the smaller towns. There are always, in small towns, considerable gaps between the occasional visits of minstrels, theatre combinations and disciples of legerdemain—and these gaps the hall-proprietors and the local dabblers in management like to fill up with lecturers. Among the large cities, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago are the only ones that give any considerable support to lectures. In New York, as in New Orleans, a speculation in this line is likely to leave the manager out of pocket. Cincinnati too is death to lectures; while in Albany, Buffalo, Detroit, Louisville, Milwaukee, and cities of that calibre, the returns are only fair from this business. Gough is the universal exception to the rule; he always draws well, for the simple reason that people expect to get a laugh out of his performance. Gough would have made a capital end man in a minstrel show.

Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago swallow everything that is offered, with eager appetite, from Emerson down to Timothy Titcomb (a funny name, but not a funny lecturer—in fact, the lanest twaddler of them all) and this year they are opening their maws wider than ever to take in a lot of freshly-imported Englishmen, who are going to fill their pockets with lecture-fees.

Our variety theatres have long recruited some of their best "talent" from the London music halls, and now the lecture people take their turn at the same sort of enterprise. Tyndall, one of the coming Englishmen, is an English reformer of some note. James Anthony Froude, another of these importations, is a historian. George Macdonald and Edmund Yates are novelists, who expect to make as much money here as Dickens did—but they will be disappointed. All will make something, however, and go home with comforted pockets.

The note of preparation is now sounding in all directions for the coming talking campaign. Soon the season will open, and night after night the voice of the lecturer will be heard in the hall. Gough will flirt his coat tails and make faces; Tyndall and Froude will prose and posturize; Tilton will toss his blonde hair and fancy the ladies are dying for him; Anna Dickinson will stride up and down and scold; Olive Logan will tear and tell stories and flash her diamonds before crowds which whisper to each other, "La, how smart that critter is;" Higginson will twiddle his respectable fingers and hem and haw; Whipple will stick his nose in his manuscript and read like a schoolboy; Du Chaillu will frisk like the Frenchman he is; Chapin will boom, and Emerson will transcendentalize, and the rising Jottins will speak his piece and pocket his fee, and wonder if he has really earned it after all.

Great is the show business and wise men confess the mighty truth. There are worse things in the world than popular lectures and there are better. No matter, so long as the hall owners find use for their halls.

SKIN DEBT.—A contemporary commenting on the sale at Paris of a book bound in human skin, says this is not the only instance of this style of binding, and mentions several cases. We have ourselves known of cases in which a thin skinned author has been so bound up in his works that it would have been inhuman to cut them up.

MISTER PAPER MAN.—Fleze publich thiss lettur fur the bennyfit uv the kristion wurld. in mi last letter (i suppose u dident git it) i told u about how the Yeller rivver was on the run up hill; well, as i was sain afore, i follored the bed uv the four-sade rivver, but it stept not and it's bussum heft a feerful sigh(t) uv water. it was grand, it waz sublime, and i drank it awl in tu a glanse. the hil up wich this rivver run waz sum 6000 uv milze abuv the level of the brute, figger-8-ively speackin, and, konsequently, in opozishun 2 the none laws uv attrackshun and repelshion; it also pu uvs that if the wurld never turnd round afore, it did that time, for if not, how did the water fall up hil? but one thing puszels me—that's how the water stade on the hil after the wurld turnd upside-down. i think the erth must hav kept its bowels open fur that occation and swallered the water. praps u don't blev the erth has bowels, but dident billy shakespear sa, "thus fur into the bowels uv the erth" &c.? (fur farther infamasion on this subjekt see the incloopeadena on the 3d uv martch). but tha aint no use uv a man puttin hiz mind out uv jint tryin tu pri into the misterens misterys uv the auntdevelin peryod, when neptune, the sun uv the jew peter, and uther hebrew (sers) found out that the wurld was square? as fur mi part, i don't bleve the wurld waz square then, fur there waz az meany "beats" in the garden uv eaden az there iz "pluns" in Jefferson market; but that aint got nothin' tu du with me, so i'll just wind up with a fu sigh and-tiff-ick observations that ma be good fur sosiety:—

SIGH-AND-TIFF-ICKS.

Fleze iz a smaul burd, smauler than a hummin q
Misskitys is a hummin bug.
Fleze aint no humbug—fleze iz a livin fackt.
I like fleze, bekaz tha make me smart.
Fleze iz gittin tu dam sharp, lately.
Fleze makes a feller cum i'u the skratch, and they raze a dint on u whenever tha tuch.
When the fleze prey i alwaze pray tu.
Fleze iz hard to kech, not bekaz tha are skarce, but bekaz tha make themselfs so.
Fleze keaps ure biud in surkulasion (thru the air.)
A sweepstake ain good tu ete. An out-law aint a inside lawyer. A sun-stroke ain't got nothin tu du with a botelace. Superangelick iz a femall super playin an angel. Piping aul hans tu quarters aint smokin them out uv the hole. A man's stummick iz in hiz konstitushun, or else his konstitushun iz in hiz stummick.
The wind haz turnd intu air lately; it'll sune be awl gas. The truth iz, foaks iz apitin the air(s) whusin so mutch. There aint enuff uv air in the sity tu give a man wind on the stumick; sum uv the boys iz just az windy az ever tho. tha seam tu hav air(s) enuff praps tha hav bean tu boston lately. wel, it's an ill wind that bloze nobody good thay sa.
Cod-liver-oyle iz awll a "cod;" sum people can liv on "coddin;" i like a good cod myself, but not when it gitz stale; tha sa cod-liver-oyle wil cure comsumshun, but i took sum uv it and a little while after thev wasnt no "grub" in the house.
A man that spekes 2ice be4 he thinks 1ce releaves his stumick and uses hiz mouth fur an exaust (tu exaust uthers).
Sum sa that kats-kill mountains, but tha mean mountains uv rats, I gess.
Dick-Shunary aint nothin tu Phil-Ossify. I dont like no one to preach woman's riots. If the streats was swept I'd sing "sweet home" with a vengeuns.
The Living-Stone haz been found, but iz now turned into a "ruckle uv benze."
There iz no nead uv sayin "on Stanley, on," bekoz he'll be "pretty wel on" az sune az he gits sum Jersy litnin. The "harp that onct threw the 'tarrers' hall" was not the bag-pipes az sum suppose.
The foundashuns uv the "tarrers" hall was not shamrock neither.
A hand on a burd is worth tu in yure pocket.
The hands uv a clock dont never strike nuthin, but they're always on time. It's the stumick uv a clock that strikes, and the hands calls time.
The clock says it's time fur me to dry up, so good by.

A BLASPHEMOUS CROW.

HE STAMPEDES AN ENTIRE CONGREGATION.

At a certain cross-road in the state of Alabama stood a small grocery or whiskey shop, where "busthead" and "chain lightning" were dealt out to the thirsty unwashed at five cents a drink, or twenty-five cents a quart. The presiding genius of this delectable institution was one bill Sikes, who, among various pets, had a domestic crow, black as the ace of spades. This crow had learned, among other things, to repeat quite plainly the words, "damn you!" which he, of course, heard frequently in the grocery. During the prevalence of a knock down and drag out fight one day, the crow was frightened and flew to the woods, never to return. About three miles from the grocery was a settlement meeting house—an old tumble down affair, only used on certain occasions, when a circuit preacher came that way. Into this building went the crow, taking peaceable possession; and two days thereafter, the church was thrown open to preaching, and a very large crowd assembled, among whom was a very old lady, who was compelled to use crutches in walking, who took her seat in the front pew, and was soon absorbed in the eloquence of the preacher. The reverend gentleman had scarcely got under full headway, and commenced thundering his anathemas at all grades of sinners, when a hoarse, croaking voice, from above, interred the ominous words:—

"Damn you!"

The preacher and congregation looked aghast at such profanity, and each peered into his neighbor's face in vain to detect some sign of guilt. Quiet was at length restored, however, and the sermon proceeded; but ere ten minutes had passed, the ominous "damn you!" again electrified the audience, and just as the preacher cast his eyes upward in search of the delinquent, the crow flew down from his perch, and alighting upon the Bible, calmly surveyed the terrified crowd and gave another doleful croak:—

"Damn you!"

The effect was electrical. Giving one startling and electrified glance at the intruder, the preacher sprang from the window, carrying sash, glass and all, with him, and set off at a break-neck pace through the woods, closely followed by his horror-stricken congregation, who had piled out of the building pell-mell after him. In the general scramble the old lady with the crutches had been knocked down in the church, where she lay, unable to rise; and the cowering bird, the crow, who was after something to eat, flew down beside her, and looking up at her very knowingly, croaked out:—

"Damn you!"

Then the old lady eyed him savagely for a few moments, and then burst forth in a tone of reckless defiance:—

"Yes, and damn you too! I had nothing to do with getting up this old Methodist meeting—and you know it!" The poor old woman had mistaken the crow for the devil, and concluded, if possible, to propitiate his Satanic majesty by denying all complicity in the affair. The world is full of just such people.

Violin and Fiddle.

Half a century ago, or thereabouts, in the village of A——, there dwelt in a quiet little cottage on the outskirts of the village of A——, a somewhat facetious Dr. Pond. The Doctor's ideas were liberal—much more so than many of his congregation; nevertheless, he kept on the even tenor of his way. He had a son named Enoch, who at an early age manifested a remarkable fondness for music, which the father cherished and cultivated with care. In the same village resided an antiquated maiden lady, who, having no care of her own to occupy her time and attention, magnanimously devoted herself to those of her neighbors. One morning she called at the doctor's and requested to see him. When he entered the room where she was seated, he perceived at a glance that something was amiss, and before he had time to extend her the usual "how d'ye do?" she added:—

"I think, Dr. Pond, that a man of your age and profession might have had something better to do, when you were in New London last week, than to buy Enoch a fiddle; all the people are ashamed that our minister should buy his son a fiddle! Oh dear, what is the world coming to, when ministers will do such things."

"Who told you I had a fiddle?" inquired the doctor.

"Who told me? Why, everybody says so, and some people have heard him play on it as they passed the door. But ain't it true, doctor?"

"I bought Enoch a violin when I went to New London."

"A violin! what's that?"

"Did you never see one?"

"Never."

"Enoch!" said the doctor, stepping to the door, "bring your violin here."

Enoch obeyed the command, but no sooner had he entered with his instrument, than the old lady exclaimed:

"La! now; there, why, it is a fiddle!"

"Do not judge rashly," said the doctor, giving his son a wink; "wait till you hear it."

Taking the hint, Enoch played Old Hundred. The lady was completely mystified; it looked like a fiddle, but who ever heard Old Hundred played on a fiddle? It could not be. So arising to depart, she exclaimed:—"I am glad I came to satisfy myself. La me! just think how people will lie!"

SATIRICAL REPROOF.—Malherbe, who prided himself on his blunt honesty, was one day shown by a courtier some poetry, which stated that France moved out of her place to receive her king. "How this must have happened in my lifetime," said Malherbe, "but, upon my word, sir, I do not recollect."

PLAYED OUT.—A piece of

MY WIFE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY WALDORF H. PHILLIPS.

She generous? Yes indeed! And oh, so gentle and kind!
Why, would you believe, she oft gives me a "piece of her mind!"
Yet there was—there was a time, when I thought her far more kind;
'Twas when she never, ever gave me a "piece of her mind!"

But since we have been married, there is a difference, I find,
For now she's always giving me a "piece of her mind!"
My virtues she never can see, to my faults she is not very blind;
And she gives me more than I want, when she gives me "a piece of her mind!"

I ought to be happy, indeed, with such a good wife, they say;
But they'd change their minds, if they got a piece of hers every day!

But what I can't understand—it's strange, as sure as you live—
Is how she gives me a piece of a mind she hasn't to give!

For accordin to law, as you know, when a man and woman are wed,
They're no longer two different persons, but one, as I've oft heard it said.
And all that is hers then is mine (so 'tis said in old law books, I find),
So you see how gen'rous she is, when she gives me a piece of my mind!

"UNCLE SCHNEIDER'S" COUNTRY LETTER.

NOTICE.

ADVERTISERS must hand in their favors before 6 o'clock on Monday evening, in order to have them appear in that week's issue.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We never answer questions by mail. All addressed to us seeking information will be answered through this column only.

CONSTANT READER, Allegan, Mich.—Chas. Collins, known by the inappropriate appellation of "The Cast Iron Man," fought George Rooke for $1,000, 16 rounds, 1 hour and 15 minutes. The stakes were awarded to Collins on a claim of foul, which had no foundation in fact, the affair being considered a swindle. At the finish, Rooke was scarcely marked, while Collins' face was beaten as smooth as a jelly, and his hands were badly puffed. He received $5 out of the stakes. He never fought anybody else, and never contended for the championship; consequently his statement that he possesses "the champion belt" is not true.

ARLINGTON, New Orleans, La.—1. Charles E. Collins, who keeps the Olympic Cafe, in this city, was never connected with the profession, although well known to most of them, who nicknamed him "the cure" on account of his name being the same as the professional person who performed that act. Charles E. Collins, the original "Cure" in America, died at New Orleans, La., Nov. 19th, 1870. 2. Watts Phillips is living in London, Eng. We are not aware that any one has purchased the exclusive right of "Nobody's Child" for America. 3. The value of the drama you name would depend entirely upon the demand for it.

J. B. Owego, N. Y.—It was an error, and was corrected in the succeeding issue. The title of the company with which they appeared was not the "Richings Grand English Opera Company," although Miss Caroline Richings was a member of it, but "The Grand English Opera Combination," and composed of members of the late Richings and Parepa-Rosa opera troupes.

H. C. F.—I. Thank you for the plan. 2. That is his proper name, but his birth place has never been clearly defined. 3. The items will be very acceptable. 4. We fear that the card has "gone where the woodbine twineth." 5. We can "scare expect one of your years" to be proficient, but you make an effort which promises well for the future.

T. C. M.—1. The rule says, if the bowler delivers a "no ball," the striker is allowed as many runs as he can get from hitting such ball, and cannot be put out; but if a run is made by hitting the ball, then one is scored for the no ball. Of course two counts—one by hit and by "no ball"—cannot be made on the same ball. 2. Yes, he is out. 3. Yes.

Run Rooster.—The victory over the Reds counts. By good training and more harmonious working together, the Mutuals might have won every game with their adversaries except, perhaps, the Reds and the Baltimores, with better support behind the pitcher they could have won nearly every game with the Reds, as the latter cannot punish Cummings' pitching.

F. M., London.—1. John McKeon and Lyman Tremaine were the counsel for Stokes, the district attorney and Mr. Beach for the prosecution. 2. We consider the Saratoga course the fastest. 3. Neither milk nor salt are used, except in the smallest possible quantities. 4. Running exercise, gradually increasing the distance.

J. K. O., North Platte, Neb.—1. According to the New York custom, B did not lose his hat, as no one had entered the shop while he was out, and his hat and coat were on his seat, which this proves to be still in the next turn. 2. By the same rule, a man cannot employ a substitute to preserve his turn in his absence.

RUN AND RIDE.—1. It is pronounced, according to the rules of English orthography, as spelt. 2. Not if some of the other clubs win all the games to be played. 3. "On Silver Wings" was the title of the serial story published by the CLIPPER in March, 1871. 4. The Herald is probably the largest circulation of the morning, and the Daily News of the evening papers.

D. F.—1. It depends in a great measure upon what you propose to raise. 2. Yes. 3. There is some reservation of railroad lands, but your best plan for information is to call at the land office or write by applying to a land agent. 4. The CLIPPER can be sent to any part of the United States.

J. M.—It is evident, from your statement of the bet, and the attendant circumstances, that the nearest distances to drive by road between the two towns was meant by the parties making the wager, and that distance must consequently be estimated by the highway.

J. W. C.—1. The first named lady was born in London, Eng., Feb. 19th, 1838. 2. The second was born in London, Eng., in 1849. 3. Lester Wallack has not sold his theatre to Mr. Sothern, that gentleman being simply engaged as a star, with certain managerial powers conceded him during the engagement.

A. L. MCGERRY, Baltimore.—Owing to getting in the newspaper mail, they were not received by us until the 10th inst., or their receipt would have been duly acknowledged. We thank you for this evidence of good feeling. The bills will be used from time to time.

TYRO, Phila.—"Can a base player be credited with assistance when he fields the ball to the base himself?" Of course not. You might as well credit the catcher with assisting when he drops a foul fly and catches it on the bound, he assisting himself to make the bound catch.

BILL PATTON, Ill.—We have not the full returns of the elections of the several states to which you refer, therefore are unable to make the comparison; but Grant's majority in Vermont in 1868 was 32,122; in West Virginia, 8,719; in South Carolina, 17,064, and in North Carolina, 12,136.

CONSTANT READER, Baltimore.—1. "Stonehenge's Rural Sports" does not treat on training trick dogs. There is a book published on that subject, which you can get by forwarding 60c. to Ed. Fasig, 167 Centre street, New York. 3. By the recognized rules of the game.

H. B. E., Somerville Mass.—If it can be proved that A made a wrong play on the hand on which he went out, then he cannot score that inning. If, on the contrary, he was not in the wrong hand, and it cannot be clearly proved that A made it, then he wins.

A. D., Brookfield, O.—1. O'Baldwin got the stakes in the match with Wormald in this country. 2. West Australian, Gladiateur and Lord Lyon each won the three great events, Two Thousand Guineas, Derby and St. Leger, in one year.

P. F., Utica, N. Y.—From your statement, the first shake was not in the game, but only to see whether A or B should commence throwing. B will therefore have to throw against A's nine fives, and, if he loses, to throw first in the regular game.

INVINCIBLE.—The Mutual eleven includes Bechtel, Fulmer and McMullen, of Philadelphia; Hatfield and Mills, of New York; and Pearce, Cummings, Start, Eggler, Boyd and Mills, of Brooklyn.

VIRUE TEMPS.—1. The fastest recorded running time for one mile is 1:42¾, by Alarm, at Saratoga. 2. Ask any billiard marker. 3. Rudolphe was regarded as the superior player at the French game, but they never played a match together at said game.

J. A. M., Baltimore, Md.—The Maryland Athletic Club, of Philadelphia, as now chartered, embraces an extent of surface having an area of 129¾ square miles, or 82,700 acres. Its length is 23 miles; average width, 5½ miles.

J. Z., Savannah, Ga.—Further than that they deal fairly with us, we know nothing about their business. We hear that two or three of them have had some difficulty of late, so that it may be prudent for you not to invest.

BOB HALFACE.—Our opinion is that the full nine innings—which constitute a game—should have been played. As rain put an end to the contest at the close of the eighth innings, both clubs scored one run, and the wager is a drawn.

CHARLOCK.—The cards having been played in the following order:—4, 3, 2, 6, 5, A was entitled to a sequence of five points. It matters not how irregularly the cards are played, when the sequence or straight is completed it counts.

R. Q. AND M., Galveston, Texas.—At auction pitch, R, having made the two points he gave, was not set back; consequently, with but one point to go, his high put him out first, and Q was the winner.

FUNF ROS, Philadelphia, Pa.—1. We have already published the life and career of R. P. Christy. 2. Miss Annie Graham is engaged for the coming season at the California Theatre, San Francisco, Cal.

M. R. L., Elmira, N. Y.—Robert Stickney is a pad rider. We do not know that the championship as regards four horse riding has ever been settled. John Henry Cooper and John Wilson are among the best.

RUNER.—W having been permitted to retire on making 26 points without protest by A, he lost the game by not insisting on W continuing to play at the proper time; it was too late when the game was finished.

J. G. AND J. H., Baltimore.—"J. G. bets J. H. that the Baltimores would win the game to be played on Sept. 10th. J. H. bets that the Red Stockings would win. Which wins?" J. H. Neither; it was a draw.

SHORT HAND, Charles City, Iowa.—1. We should think that a good verbatim phonographic reporter could easily obtain employment. 2. St. Louis, Mo., or Chicago, Ill. 3. The salary would depend somewhat on the demand for such reporters.

D. C., West Range, N. Y.—Africa is a little larger than South America and a good deal larger than the continent of North America.

J. D., Bridgeport, Conn.—The most natural way is always the best, and circumstances often alter cases, but generally a bow is all that etiquette demands.

GEO. GROVES, Brooklyn.—All bets must be paid as the battle money was awarded, and it was given to Chambers, in accordance with the referee's decision.

K. K. K., Detroit, Mich.—You had better stick to your trade. You will find it much easier earning a living that way than attempting to perform upon the tight rope.

CORK, St. Paul, Minn.—1. A letter addressed to the lady in care of the CLIPPER will reach her. 2. At casino, a player cannot stop and count game until all the cards are played.

C. S. F., Chicago.—The fastest time for one mile in racing is 1:42¾, made by Alarm at Saratoga, July 17, 1872. In England there is no official time taken on the turf.

H. F. Jonesville, Mich.—The player, in his regular turn, can make the trump what he pleases, whether he has suit in hand or not.

A. A. G., Mount Vernon, O.—At poker dice, four sixes beat four aces; the latter are the lowest numbers that can be thrown at dice, counting as ones only.

FOXEE, Oswego.—The player, having been called, must show his hand to the board. If no one had called him, then he was not obliged to show his hand to any one.

IVES, Salem.—1. The striker hitting a fair foul, which is stopped by the fielder with his hat or cap, of course has to run to 1st base, but he cannot be put out. 2. Yes, if called.

C. J. S., Marshall, Kentucky.—The nine refusing to play before the umpire had called the game forfeit it by a score of 9 to 0. The bets go by the umpire's decision.

Sir JOHN.—There are two associations, viz., the amateur and professional. The former do not recognise professional clubs in their association.

J. W. T., Virginia City, Nevada.—Billy Dwyer defeated Johnny Walker, and fought draws with Tommy Chandler and Jack Turner.

HUNT AND SCOTTY, Philadelphia, Pa.—Saymour's majority in this state in 1866 is stated by the principal almanacs in their election returns to have been as given in print.

GAD, Scranton, Pa.—1. Ned O'Baldwin was never on exhibition at a museum in this city as a giant. 2. Thank you, but we do not require a correspondent in your city.

CONSTANT READER.—Tom Allen did not defeat Mike McCools, though he had decidedly the best of the fight, which was given in against him.

H. C. Amherst.—The official returns give Caldwell nearly two thousand majority, and we hear no more of the deposed candidate contesting the election.

A. L., Washington, D. C.—As the euchre pack is used the highest card is 500. In some places custom gives the ace the highest place.

F. H. PRATT, Weir, Taunton, Mass.—You have placed us under other obligations for old bills kindly sent; they will be used in due season.

F. J. T.—1. There are such places, but all do not care to avail themselves of their benefits; they prefer to take their chances outside. 2. We do not believe it.

WEBSWAYER.—You are correct; the words Jack and five should have been transposed, so as to read three fives and one Jack, with a five turned up, as the final part of the answer explained.

A READER.—Your impression that certain persons are to be barred, but we will endeavor to give you a more definite answer in our next.

RAFFLE.—In throwing raffles, the first raffle thrown decides the bet. You cannot throw raffles in three throws, for that is necessarily becomes the game of counting spots.

ROB.—A wins the bet. The bill was intrinsically bad, and the $20 was paid for it solely as a work of art, and not on account of its genuineness.

H. R., New Orleans.—At dominoes, when a partner blocks the game, he counts the pieces in his opponents' hands, but not those in his partner's hand.

COIN, Philadelphia, Pa.—Inquire at the mint in your city; we cannot give you definite information on the subject.

IGNORAMUS, Lawrence, Mass.—1. By its purity and the price of gold. 2. Call an athlete to order.

H. G. R., Bartlesonville.—Joe Coburn's height is 5ft. 9in.; Jim Mace's, 5ft. 8¾in.

K., Albany, N. Y.—Beddy the Blacksmith's real name is William Pearce.

G. W. R., Bengal Point, N. J.—The Theatre Royal, at Croydon, Surrey, England, is licensed to Thomas Lacy.

"WORRY CURE, Jr.," Boston.—Thank you for continued favors; the old mill will have a place as soon as space permits.

H. F. C., Providence.—Wash the dog daily with carbolic soap and warm water.

D. C., Quincy, Ill.—Three aces is the highest throw at poker dice.

W. C., San Francisco.—Silk Stocking's mile time at Saratoga was 1:43, and not 1:42. The telegraph was in error.

H. G., Philadelphia, Pa.—A letter addressed in care of the CLIPPER will reach the party named.

O. S., Kansas City.—We are already attended to, as you may see by reading our paper.

J. H., Fredericksville.—We cannot spare the time nor space necessary to give that information.

W. J. FASSIL, Phila.—Jim Mace was born at Swaffham, Norfolk, Eng., in April, 1831.

H. F. Howell.—Yes; Jim Vega defeated Tom Allen near New Orleans, La.

ROMEO.—Obtain a personal interview with some manager, show him what you can do, and solicit an engagement.

MARNEW STREET, Philadelphia.—As the full game was not played, owing to rain, the bet is a draw.

MRS. V. A. R., Virginia City, Nevada.—A letter addressed to him in care of the CLIPPER will reach him.

HARRY JOSEPH, Hancock, Mich.—Jack takes the deal, and is the best card in the cookie pack.

F. McH., Cleveland, O.—Received, and filed for early use. Thanks.

PAUL WARREN.—North Carolina was carried by the Grant republicans in the recent election.

JOE, Philadelphia, Pa.—Seven dollars and fifty cents for each insertion.

J. E. S., Memphis, Tenn.—When you return your old card, a new one will be sent.

READER, Baltimore, Md.—Miss Lotia Crabtree, and she was born in this city Nov. 7th, 1847.

CONSTANT READER, Lebanon, Pa.—George M. Kelly is looked upon by many as the champion leaper of America.

J. J. S., Washington, D. C.—We have not received any such report.

CONSTANT READER, Paducah, Ky.—1. There is. 2. They are not. 3. Kit burns died in Water street, this city.

PITCHER.—If they accept the challenge they must come on and play.

RANDOLPH.—Your team would not hitch well together. It can be strengthened.

W. R. ANDREW.—R. who bets that a club would win by so many runs, and they do not win at all, loses.

C. K. H., Haverhill, Mass.—See answer to "Weekawken" in reference to the best hand at cribbage.

P. C.—He did. 2. Felix Larkin was killed during an affray in this city, Nov. 25, 1865.

HARRY ANDERSON, Washington.—We cannot state positively, but we think O'Baldwin is. Will endeavor to find out.

P. F., Jr.—Jim Mace was born in April, 1831; Allen is thirty-one years old.

C. L. F., Camden.—We believe there were, but we cannot state how many.

TIMOTHY.—It was all right; you need not have given yourself any trouble in the matter.

EUCHRE, Detroit.—When a player assists, the partner cannot go alone.

F. W. Z., Wheeling, West Va.—1. Josh Ward's time for 5 miles, 25:10, is the fastest time on record. 2. It is not disputed.

R. W., Brooklyn.—John does not lose the bet if there are more than one thousand persons on board.

O'NEIL, Detroit.—The party who made the trump can play it alone, but no other player has that privilege.

PITTSBURGH, Pittsburgh, Pa.—You can get the majority of Stephen C. Foster's songs from any music dealer.

G. W. S.—You have doubtless been misinformed, as the arbitration had nothing to do with such questions.

J. F. W.—At casino, neither player has the right to take up his cards and count them before the pack is run.

C. F. K., Baltimore.—We cannot furnish you with the Philadelphia rules, as they are out of print.

POWELL, Chicago.—1. Mr. Bonner never owned the race horse Lexington. 2. The fastest one mile running time is 1:42¾.

GEO. G. BORWICK, Cincinnati.—Sayers did not fight subsequent to his battle with Heenan.

NEWS OF THE WEEK BOILED DOWN.

☞ The labors of the Geneva Court of Arbitration ended on Sept. 14th, when a final meeting was held at the Hotel de Ville, and Count Sclopis, president of the court, announced that the sum awarded to the United States for satisfaction of all claims referred to the arbitration was $15,500,0.0, gold. Count Sclopis was applauded at the close of his remarks, and upon the announcement of the court twenty-two guns were fired in honor of the settlement of this knotty question. Sir Alexander Cockburn refused to sign, except in the case of the Alabama, the names of Charles Francis Adams, Count Sclopis, Count Bluntschli and Baron d'Itajuba being attached to the document, which is duplicated. The amount awarded to individual claimants is about $11,500,000. England has been the responsible for losses sustained by the cruise of the Alabama, Florida and Shenandoah alone, the court being of opinion that these were the only cases in which Great Britain failed to fulfil the duties prescribed under the rules of the Washington treaty or by the principles of law. The London Times, in commenting upon the decision, says:—"We cheerfully consent to pay the sum awarded, as tending to obviate similar difficulties in the future." The English representatives were to leave Geneva on the 16th inst., and the Americans on the following day.

☞ The corporation of Berlin has extended to Bismarck an honorary citizenship. At the meeting of the Emperors of Germany, Austria and Russia, the cross of the Order of St. Stephen of Hungary was also conferred on him by the Emperor of Austria, as likewise on Gortschakoff and Gen. Manteuffel. Count Andrassy was decorated with the Order of the Black Eagle by the Emperor of Germany and with the Order of St. Andrew by the Emperor of Russia. The Emperor William has made the Emperor of Austria honorary colonel of the Schleswig-Holstein regiment of Hussars; and the sons of the Prince Imperial of Germany have been appointed to colonelcies in the Russian army.

☞ Billy Forrester, who is charged with the murder of Mr. Benjamin Nathan, was brought before the Supreme Court, in this city, on the 16th, on a writ of habeas corpus, issued by Judge Leonard. After hearing the arguments of the prisoner's counsel and the district attorney, the judge discharged the writ and remanded Forrester, who was taken back to his quarters at police headquarters.

☞ Advices from Rio Janeiro state that the elections for members of congress in Brazil were attended with disorder; riots occurred, the troops were called out and several persons bayoneted. The returns indicate that the government party will have a majority in the next congress. The negotiations between Gen. Mitre and the Brazilian government are expected to result in a peaceful settlement of the difficulty with the Argentine confederation.

☞ The mass meeting held at Union square, Tammany and Irving halls, in favor of the nominations made by the Cincinnati and Baltimore conventions, on the night of Sept. 12th, was one of the largest political demonstrations ever held in this city. Among the speakers were Gen. N. P. Banks, R. M. T. Hunter, Fernando Wood, Chauncey M. Depew, Gov. Walker and S. S. Cox.

☞ Thomas Farrell, a keeper in the Ward's Island Lunatic Asylum, has been arrested upon charges preferred by Dr. Echeverria, who has filed an affidavit to the effect that Farrell caused the death of a patient named John N. Orvell by brutally maltreating him, last week. Another patient, Horatio Seymour, is said to be lying at the point of death, suffering from a fractured skull, produced by a blow from a spade, alleged to have been dealt him by Farrell.

☞ King Amadeus, at the opening of the Spanish Cortes on Sept. 14th, stated in his address that all efforts to establish diplomatic relations with the Pope had proved without avail. He recommended that the reform in Cuba would be carried into effect as soon as the rebellion shall be over.

☞ A man named Heenan is reported to have been killed by Indians at Bear Creek, Wyoming territory, on the 10th inst., bullets being found in his body. Three others are missing and four mules were carried off. Serious troubles are anticipated in that region.

☞ During the military display at Berlin, Prussia, on Sept. 7th, serious disturbances occurred. A party of rioters, enraged at an advance in the price of beer, attacked and wrecked the brewery of Hopf & Co. The police charged upon the rioters with drawn swords, many being wounded.

☞ Two marine disasters occurred on Sept. 10th, the schooner Emily Graham being wrecked on Prince Edward Island, and nine persons lost, and the steamer Pesth, running between Quebec and Emily's crew were drowned by the vessel running ashore near Quebec, C. E.

☞ The emperors of Germany, Austria and Russia, at their conference in Berlin, are said to have resolved to advise the Pope to abandon the Jesuits, and agreed to use their good offices with the Italian government for the protection of foreign religious corporations in Italy.

☞ Advices from Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, state that during the late elections for members of Congress an electoral meeting in one of the churches was broken up by the police, who charged upon the assemblage with their swords, wounding a number of citizens.

☞ A despatch received in this city from the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's agent, at Panama, reports the loss of one of their steamship America. Three of the European crew and thirty Chinese passengers were lost.

☞ The bark Ritza Maria was run into and sunk by the propeller J. W. Brayton, on Saturday night, Sept. 14th. The crew were saved, but vessel and cargo are believed to be a total loss.

☞ Deputy Sheriff Williams, who was shot during the late troubles in Pope county, Ark., has since died. He throws all the blame of the disturbances upon the shoulders of the present officials.

☞ A land slide is reported near Fraga, Snain. The bed of the river Cinca was filled with earth and rocks, the waters forced from their course and the neighboring country inundated. A bridge was carried away, vessels swamped, and many lives lost.

☞ Eleven of the rioters who attacked the soldiers at Narbonne, France, during the late riots, have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from four to fifteen months, and fined from 200 to 500 francs.

☞ At Salt Lake City, Utah, there were received during the past week 18,880 pounds of crude bullion and a ton of pure silver bullion. A number of lease & mining transactions, involving a large amount of money, are reported.

☞ The coach drivers of this city met at Constitution Hall on the 15th inst., and resolved to give their employers the alternative of a strike or compliance with their demand for an increase of $2 per week.

☞ A number of vagrants have been arrested by the Cuban government, and many of them have been sent to Havana and will be set to work on the line of military defences which is projected.

☞ About one hundred claims, with the proofs, have been filed before the commission on the claims of citizens of the United States against Spain. Dr. Howard will, it is expected, file a claim for a very large sum of money.

☞ The coroner's jury have found a verdict against Patrick F. Dennahy for the murder of Geo. H. Faver at Providence, R. I., and $500 reward is offered for the arrest of the accused.

☞ The volcano Maunaloa, on the island of Hawaii, is reported in active eruption again, and the spectacle is described as magnificent.

☞ The government intends taking immediate action in regard to the state of affairs along the Rio Grande, investigation having proven that neither property nor life is safe there.

☞ Charles Sumner has been nominated for governor, and Geo. M. Stearns for lieutenant-governor, by the Massachusetts liberals and democrats.

☞ A despatch from Lisbon states that the English steamship Bella has been totally wrecked off the coast of Portugal. No details have been received.

☞ Napoleon and Eugenie enjoyed a sail around the Isle of Wight, Eng., on board the American yacht Sappho, on Sept. 9th, as the guests of Mr. Ashbury.

☞ Chas. Bassett dangerously shot his mother-in-law, Mrs. Staples, through whose influence, it is alleged, he had been separated from his wife, at Lakeville, Mass., Sept. 7th.

☞ Michael Callahan, a peaceable citizen of Chicago, Ill., was stabbed through the heart by an unknown drunken ruffian on the 8th inst.

☞ Freight and cattle trains on the Missouri Pacific Railroad collided near St. Louis on the 9th inst., killing about forty head of cattle and involving a loss of about $30,000.

☞ The last weekly edition of the Paris Illustration was seized by the police because it contained insulting caricatures of the Prussians.

☞ A train on the Pennsylvania railroad was wrecked near Middletown, Pa., by a misplaced switch, on the 10th inst., thirteen persons being injured.

☞ The surveying party in the Yellowstone Valley have been compelled to turn back, after reaching the mountains, in consequence of the hostility of the Indians.

☞ Twenty-five miners were drowned by the accidental flooding of a coal pit near Herbial, on the Meuse, Belgium, on Sept. 12th.

☞ Nearly all the crew of the Norwegian bark Byfroget Christianson, from Pernambuco for the Baltic, died on the voyage. The cause of the mortality is unexplained.

☞ The government clerks of Havana, Cuba, deny that their conduct is concerned with politics, or is intended to disturb the peace, protesting their loyalty to Spain.

☞ The Mountain Meadows massacre of years ago, which was charged upon the Indians by the Mormons, is now stated by a witness to have been perpetrated by the latter themselves.

☞ A series of light shocks of earthquake were experienced in the river valley of Inyo county, Cal., last week. No damage was done.

☞ A vessel, supposed to be the bark Newcastle, from Liverpool for Savannah, Ga., has been wrecked off the coast of Iceland, and all her crew are supposed to have perished.

☞ The efforts to obtain a jury for the second trial of Mrs. Laura D. Fair, at San Francisco, Cal., have not yet been successful. The trial will take place before the Supreme Court.

☞ During the exercises at the laying of the corner stone of St. Mary's Catholic Church, at Bangor, Me., on Sept. 14th, a portion of the platform broke down, injuring a number of persons.

ATHLETIC vs. BOSTON.

The fifth champion game between the Athletics, of Philadelphia, and the Red Stockings, of Boston, was played on Saturday, the 14th inst., on the ground of the former club. We gave in our last issue a telegraphic report of the game, so that it only remains for us to publish the score and a few items concerning it. The game was the most important contest of the season, and the interest in it was heightened by the fact that the Athletics had defeated the Bostons in the two previous contests, and the latter were therefore anxious to redeem their record. The Athletics, on the other hand, were confident of victory, while the Bostonians were equally confident that they would have the best of the game. The grounds were crowded, and the sum received from the admission fees was the largest ever taken in at a game in this city, the receipts being $1,500. The first two innings passed without a run being scored by either side, but in the third Leonard, the Boston catcher, made a home run, and Pearce also made a home run, and Schafer followed suit by making a two-baser. In the fourth Leonard made a home run, and Pearce also made a two-baser, and Schafer followed suit by making a three-baser. In the fifth Leonard made a home run, and Pearce also made a two-baser, and Schafer followed suit by making a three-baser. HARRY SOLLIDAY contemplates a tour to Australia, returning to England via San Francisco, Cal., and through the principal cities of the United States.

MISS LOUISA SOVER, at present traveling with Mr. Howard Paul's entertainment, will sail for America early in October next, she having been engaged by Messrs. Jarrett and Palmer for Booth's Garden, N. Y.

WILLIAM GOODHALL has obtained a five years' lease of the New theatre and opera house, Aberdeen, Scotland.

Musical.

A TENOR at GOSWICK ROSSA, the celebrated singer and professor of the lyric art, M. Richard, has made his debut at the Grand Opera, Paris, France, with great success, and this new star has already secured a prominent place in the operatic firmament. It is said that he is quite a young man, aged about twenty, and of most pleasing exterior. His first appearance was made at the performance of the week in "La Favorita," and in the part he had to contend against the redoubtable memory of the greater Duprez, and his successor Gardoni, he still contrived to please a critical audience, whose enthusiastic applause testified to the talent of the performer. His voice is full of tenderness, but not lacking power, is heard to great advantage in those passages where power is required to be shown.

MISS FLORENCE COTRILLE, a charming young dame and step-daughter of Mr. Samuel Cotrille, one of the managers of the Olympic Theatre, New York, made a successful debut at Savona, Italy, Aug. 24th, singing Adina in "Elisir d'Amore." Her performance was highly commended by the Italian journals.

Variety Halls.

AT THE SUN MUSIC HALL, London, Eng., the company was as follows for the week commencing Sept. 2d:—George Leybourne, the lion comique; Jolly Nash, the leading comic; Fred Coyne, the Irish comic; Ned Leigh, the Scotch comic; Ned Leigh and Lizzie Coyne, the Harrison Ashe of negro comics; Patti Goddard, serio-comic; Harry Rankin, comic; Maggie Elmore, serio-comic; Frank Hopkerton, eccentric comic singer; Mr. and Mrs. Holland, Mr. G. Fredale, the petite singer, and Mr. Jas. Hoare, the lion-hearted; Leggett and Allen, pedestal dancers, and the brothers Valleau, gymnasts, had been added to the company.....A large number of musical performers held a meeting at the Royal Music Hall, on Aug. 22d, and formed an anti-agency association and co-operative union. Each member is to pay 1s. per week and five per cent on all engagements procured by the society, all amounts paid in to each performer to be booked to his account, and he to receive a quarterly dividend on the amount so entered. Several of the prominent performers had also promised donations. A subsequent meeting was held on Aug. 29th, when the matter was further discussed by prominent professionals, and they adjourned until Sept. 4th.....Billy Ashcroft, an American performer, made his first appearance at the Oxford on Aug. 26th, in his musical act, and obtained success.

JAMES FISHPOOL, proprietor of the Shakespeare Music Hall, Manchester, Eng., died Aug. 24th of bronchitis.

Circuses.

FOWLE'S CIRCUS was at Ashton-under-Lyne, Eng., at our latest advices.....Fowell's Circus was at Taunton, Eng.....Hengler's Circus was at Bristol, Eng., where John Hilton Hengler was highly appearing in his tight-rope entertainment.....Charles Adams' Circus was at Southport, Eng.....Newsome's Circus was at Preston, Eng.....Swallow's Circus was at Dundee, Scotland.....Hutchinson and Taylcome's Circus was located at Jersey, Channel Islands.....Allen's Circus was at Whitby, Eng.

Miscellaneous.

THE MISSES ANDERSON gave their magical entertainment at Dover, Eng., during the week commencing Aug. 26th.

THE MOR BROTHERS, American skaters, commenced an engagement at the Theatre Royal, Liverpool, Eng., on Aug. 26th.

MISS DARTON HASELL, who has held for several years past the position of professor of elocution and dramatic action at the London, Eng., Academy of Music, will leave for a professional tour of America early in October next.

THE TWO SIGNOR NICCOLINI'S, accompanied by Kisina Mordan, vocalist, and Sir Toby Tomtit, performed at Castleford, Eng., Aug. 27th.

PROFESSOR MORSY, magician and ventriloquist, arrived in La Paz, Bolivia, S. A., which is 1,500 feet above the level of the sea, on July 9th last. The snow is reported very deep and the weather cold. He commenced a series of performances at the theatre, performing on Thursdays and Saturdays. Money is reported very scarce, and one half that is in circulation is counterfeit. As soon as mules could be procured he was to have started for Oruro, Sucre and Potosi, and so on for a distance of 1,500 miles to Montevideo.

MISS LAURA KEENE,
on the invitation of LITERARY and CHRISTIAN
YOUNG MEN'S ASSOCIATIONS, will give a SERIES of COSTUME RECITALS,
ILLUSTRATED POEMS,
throughout the States, aided by the arts of
PAINTING, COSTUMES, MUSIC, and MLLE. CLARA STELLA, pupil of MADAME EMMA SEILER, with SIGNOR G. MOROSINI, pianist to the KING OF ITALY.
Miss Keene's inaugural recital was given before a Convention of Ministers, and Teachers in Gloversville, N. Y., on the 3d of September last. She held her audience spell-bound by pathos, or convulsed them with laughter

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

THE TRAGEDY.

"La Dame aux Camelias," I think that was the play;
The house was packed from pit-to-dome with the gallant and the gay;
Who had come to see the tragedy, and while the hours away.
There was the ruined Spendthrift, and Beauty in her prime;
There was the grave Historian, and there the man of Rhyme,
And the surly Critic, front to front, to see the play of "Crime."

And there was pompous Ignorance, and wise in Honiton lace;
Sir Cynosure and Sir Pandarus, and the music played apace.
But of all that crowd I only saw a single, single face!
That of a girl whom I had known in the summers long ago,
When her breath was like the new mown hay, or the sweetest flowers that grow.
When her heart was light, and her soul was white as the winter's driven snow.

And there she sat with her great brown eyes, they wore a troubled look;
And I read the history of her life as it were an open book;
And saw her soul, like a slimy thing, in the bottom of a brook.
There she sat in her rustling silk, with diamonds on her wrist,
And on her brow a gleaming thread of pearl and amethyst,
"A cheat, a gilded grief," I said, and my eyes were filled with mist.

What if the count were true or false? I did not care, not I;
What if Camille for a remand died? I did not see her die.
There sat a woman opposite, who held me with her eye!
There sat a woman opposite, who held me with her eye!
The great green curtain fell on all, on laugh, and wine and woe,
Just as death came day will fall 'twixt me and life, I know!
The play was done, the latter play, and the people turned to go.

And did they see the tragedy? they saw the painted scene;
They saw a husband, the jealous fool, and the sick Parisian queen;
But they did not see the tragedy, the one I saw, I mean!
They did not see that cut-cold face, that furtive look of care;
Or seeing her jewels, only said, "The lady's rich and fair."
But I tell you 'twas the Play of Life, and that woman played Despair!

A ROMANTIC SUICIDE.

A melancholy occurrence, which has no parallel in the records of romantic crime, recently took place in Naples, Italy. In the Rivier a di Chiaja resides Sig. Seraphino Rissi, who is the official agent in Naples of the Royal Lottery bureaus, and the owner of a magnificent mi k bazaar and a private banking house on the Toledo. He has a son, Giovanni, and two daughters. Mrs. Rissi died several years ago. The son had long lived in an English boarding house, in the Strada Santa Catrina di Chiaja, kept by one Byrne. In old Bomba's flourishing days, a groom was sent to England to purchase valuable horses. While in London his Majesty's groom died. By the old king's permission, the horses were given to Byrne, who was an expert jockey. Byrne went to Naples and was engaged in his majesty's stables. Step by step he advanced to the position of master of horses. When the old king was dying he did not forget the horseman. During the brief and unhappy reign of Francis the Second, Byrne retained his old position, and when the royal family was driven from Naples, his queen promised the horseman that he or his family should never want as long as her purse could assist them. Byrne had saved money, and when quiet reigned in Naples, he fitted up a commodious and respectable boarding house, which has ever since been the favorite resort of tourists in moderate circumstances.

Young Giovanni Rissi had been for several years a risitor at Byrne's house, ostensibly to procure a knowledge of English, but really to court one of Byrne's daughters. Mr. Byrne had two daughters, Eliza and Minna, who were accomplished and very great beauty. Eliza, the elder, added to her remarkable personal charms an amiability of character sufficient to win the most fastidious. She formed a union with young Rissi, and both lived with a firm determination of becoming one day man and wife. The marriage day was finally settled upon, but Rissi's father objected. Mr. Byrne was indignant at the elder Rissi's objection, and refused to permit his daughter to hold further communication with the banker's son. From the 6th to the 9th inst., which included the day assigned for their wedding (Aug. 8th), nothing was heard of Miss Byrne or Giovanni Rissi. Rumors of an elopement were inevitable, the general belief being that they had fled to Wemys' Bay, near Greenock, Scotland, where Miss Byrne had many friends. About 7 o'clock on the evening of the proposed nuptials day, when the sun had just set over the grand bay of Naples, and while thousands were going to the princely grounds of the Villa Reale to hear the music or revel in the luxuries of the daintily fashioned saloons, the attention of a policeman was attracted to something which was occasionally rolled by the tide up the convex walling of the public garden on the bay. Tresses, the folds of a silken dress, and also the garments of a man made the gen d'armes hasten to the authorities of the police house and announce what he had seen. The morgue book with its dusky covering, was sent to the spot and the objects were hoisted on board. A young man and woman, bound together with cords around the ankles and necks, were revealed to the men in the boat. The girl had been beautiful. The pearly teeth, chiselled features, and splendid auburn tresses put the corpse mongers out of their routine of cold carelessness for once. The portly form of the well-known and universally admired Giovanni Rissi was the discovered. The music in the garden was hushed, and the news of the discovery sped through every circle within the Villa Reale—nobles, untitled aristocracy and plebeians. The point of the public garden opposite gloomy Vesuvius, where the corpses were found, was thronged with spectators, and the boat was followed on its way up the bay to the dead house. A vial of prussic acid was found on Rissi, and it was the opinion of the police that he died from the effects of poison. The bodies were taken to the late dwelling of Miss Byrne, and afterward the remains of Giovanni Rissi were sent to his father's house.

GRAND LARCENY AT WHOLESALE.

Captain Badger, chief of police at New Orleans, La., received the following letter the other day from a lamenting husband. It tells a strange story in an amusing way, and the author may be complimented upon the powers of description. After reading the following letter, you come to the conclusion that the fascinating "Susannah" has been in the habit of traveling barefooted. Those of our readers, says the Picayune, who have wives, are recommended to look out for the gay Lothario, for he may turn up in this section, and play his seductive arts upon the weaker sex of the Crescent City:—

A man by the name of Charles C——e, a work for me in July. He left my house on Saturday night, July 27th, taking with him my wife and about $1,000 of my money and a horse and two silver watches, one single and one double case. They were last heard from near——, on the 30th of the same month. The horse has been recovered. The man is, apparently, a steamboatman, and claims New Orleans as a home. He is about six feet high, will weigh about two hundred pounds, is very straight, with a swinging gait, wears No. 9 shoes, toes turned out; has a heavy dark beard, smiles when he talks, dark complexion, weighs about 180 pounds, dark yellow eyes, or perhaps dark blue.

My wife is years of age, quite small, weighs perhaps 95 or 100 pounds, light complexioned, but badly sunburnt, giving the appearance of being dark. She is a plain looking old country woman, and addicted to smoking a pipe. Hair light, eyes blue, short, round face, speaks coarse for a woman, chews tobacco and has a long, slim nose—stands straight out, two front teeth missing, and the rest of her teeth are very defective. Her finger nails are long and fine, as much so as any I have ever noticed. Her name is Susannah. Toe nails are generally quite small, and most especially the little toe and the next one to it. In her walk, toes turn in, right foot turns in more than the left, and she has a quick step.

The letter is accompanied by a note suggesting that the man has "shaken" the woman; may be that he has made away with her, and a request is made that a sharp lookout may be kept for him.

AN ATTRACTIVE WIDOW.

—Report says that Milton P. Lantz, a well known carpenter of this city, has eloped with a widow lady formerly residing in Macedonia. Mr. Lantz has been working in that village for some time past in the employ of Thomas, Miller & Co., of this city. He has a wife here, having been married about a year, but, strange to say, did not come home with the other workmen on Saturday nights. They naturally took notice of this, and also of the fact that he paid more attention than was necessary to a handsome young widow woman connected with their boarding-house. On inquiry they were told that his Sabbaths were spent in "tripping ambrosial bliss" in her presence, and that he told her he was parted from his wife. On the 5th of August Lantz went to the office of his employers, and stating that he had been offered a position in Cleveland which he desired to accept, received full payment at their hands for his services. About this time he commenced to turn all his possessions into "portable property," sold such as which he neid against other parties at a large discount, disposed of a horse and carriage at low figures, and thus filled his pockets for his contemplated deed. It is a week or more since he left Akron. The widow at Macedonia is missing. Certain evidences tend to the cruel belief that they have joined fortunes and are together enjoying the world and illicit love. Mr. Lantz's connections are among the most respectable, and are deeply pained by the reports of his flight. He was a hard-working mechanic, and hitherto respected by all who knew him. He had no family other than the wife, whom he has left to grieve at his cruelty. Where the guilty couple have flown to no one knows, and a doubtful if they will be pursued. Mrs. Lantz is staying with her friends, and, we understand, has been left without any resources by her faithless husband.—Akron, O., Times.

THE BURROUGHS MURDER TRIAL.

—The September term of the Oyer and Terminer Court for Passaic county, New Jersey, was begun in Paterson on the 9th inst., Judge Bedle presiding. The trial of Van Winkle Bogart, who is indicted for the murder of Ransom F. Burroughs, was set down for Sept. 23d. Bogart's counsel, Col. Woodruff, was expected to arrive from Europe on the 13th. This murder was one of the most remarkable in the annals of crime. For participation in it, Bogart's paramour, Libbie Garrabrant, was condemned to be hanged, t ie sentence be ng after wa ds commuted to imprisonment for life. Libbie was sent to the state prison at Trenton. There is confined the wife of the murdered man, who was sent to state prison some time ago, before her husband's death, for keeping a disorderly house in Paterson. The two women sometimes meet in prison, and at such times Mrs. Burroughs becomes almost crazy with rage, hurling crockery or whatever she can lay her hands on at Libbie. Libbie is apparently contented and happy, and she says that she is happier where she is than she would be if free and pursuing her former degraded course of life.

A SINGULAR MARRIAGE CEREMONY.

—It having recently come to the knowledge of the authorities that a man named Ross, and a woman named Lawrence, who lived together as man and wife at Dalkeith, Scotland, but who were not lawfully married, had registered at least two of their four children as legitimate, they are being proceeded against on the charge of false registration. The man declares that he was under the impression he was properly married, owing to a ceremony he went through with the woman. In 1867 the parties left Dalkeith for Galashiels, and not having the requisite funds to get married by a minister, they each took a handful of meal and knelt down, facing each other, after placing a basin between them. Both then placed their handfuls of meal in the basin and mixed it, in token that they "would not sever until death did them part." After swearing to this effect upon a Bible, they then rose and declared themselves man and wife. They afterwards returned to Dalkeith, where they have since wi his feddle."

BIRTHS EXTRAORDINARY.

—A Jewish woman residing at Pilten, Courland, Russia, has, within the period of ten months, given birth to seven children! At the end of July, 1871, she brought four girls into the world, and towards the end of May, the present year, she presented her husband with two boys and one girl. Mother and children are doing well. The Jewish race is notably prolific, but this is beyond a joke.

A Western Showman was exhibiting a giantess who kept the scales in the vicinity of six hundred pounds. She was "like heavenly pasture, large and fair," and proved a very profitable card. In order that these voluminous and profitable charms should not be sequestered from him, the showman secured a life interest in them by marriage. Unfortunately the bride sickened even unto death, and a council of physicians declared her recovery impossible. The disconsolate showman wandered out of the village where "unmerciful disaster" had overtaken him, and leaning over a fence, gave way to a flood of tears. A sympathetic bystander, learning the cause of his grief, attempted consolation by depicting what the future might have in store for him. "Oh," said the pseudo widower, "that is all very well, but the thing that worries me is what I am to do now. You see she's so big that I'm pestered to know whether I'd better coax her into a graveyard to die, or get up two expensive funerals."

BONES AND THE MONKEY TRICKS.

INTERLOCUTOR.—What's the matter with you, Mr. Bones? Why, your usually serene countenance resembles this evening the skin of a striped hyena, while your eyes seem ready, "like two stars, to start from their spheres."

BONES.—Dat's a touchin' allusion to de stars and stripes, I spose. But I know I does look kind o' streaked, and so would you, too, if you'd bin froo de same farocious scratchin dat I hab.

INT.—What, the women have been at you again, have they? raking you fore and aft, as though you had been a piratical cruiser.

BONES.—Well, it was a "she," but it wasn't a woman, nudder. You shall hyar all about it. You know dere's been a sort of speaking attachment at ween dat gal, Suse Lippitt, and myself. Well, one day las' week I inwite Suse down ober to Staten Island to a sort o' pickle-nic dey was gibbin' dere. She 'cepted de invite, and we put off accordin'. We 'tached de wrong landin'; de grove was at de ober side ob de island, so we started to walk it on foot.

INT.—How else could you walk it but on foot?

BONES.—Why, dere was an omblybus driver dat collared me and want to make me ride wid him anybow, but I hit him a clip and made him walk off on his ear—dat's how. Well—h' ya! we started in, Suse swingin' her Dolly Vardens to kill, and me flourishin' my cane in a way to make de gals wonder. De whole road was dusty an' de sun was hot, and eb'ry public garden we come to Suse called for a wanilla and I went to de bar for a hors.

TAMBO.—Why, Brudder Bones, you'm wusser dan an old cracked hand organ; you fetch up at every bar wid a round turn, and den stagger off worse than ever.

BONES.—Dat's because de whistles wants wettin'. Well, h' ya! bime by we comes to an flowitin' lookin' retreat wid a parrot swingin' in front, and says I:—"Suse, nebber mind de pickle nic; let's switch off and dine here. So we hauled up to de table. Dar was plenty ob gooseberry wine, and all sorts o' chicken fixins. Suse talked and laft all de time, but I couldn't do nuffin' but eat. Bime by I felt her ticklin' me in de ribs, but I pretend not to notice and went on eatin', tinkin' she'd come round. Den I felt her foot—it's like a hake shabbel, you know—tenderly pressin' my corns. I nearly hollered dat time, but I went on eatin' and drinkin'. Den I felt her hand feelin' round my pockets, and somefin' poke me in de back, and den a pair o' arms was trow'd roun' my neck, while mine encircled her waist, and a double set of claws was fastened in my wool and began tuggin' as if dey was tryin' to pull de scalp off. I looked in de opposite glass, and, seein' a figger dat I took't fo' de debbil, I tought it was all up and began hollerin' bloody murder, while Suse was yellin' out:—"O, de debbil! de debbil!" wid all her might. Just den de landlord come in, and bust into a laf. "Why," said he, "dat ain't no debbil; dat's my pet monkey, Jocko, dat ran away dis mornin'!" "Well, den," said I, arter I'd got a spoon good scratchin', "I wan you'd do to—— wid dey always does in Washin'ton when a bill is before congress dat seems to hang fire."

INT.—What was that, sir?

BONES.—Remove de offensive claws. And he did remove de offensive claws, and I got up and dusted, and I hadn't laid eyes on Suse since.

INT.—That will do, sir. We will now have—

The Stolen Kiss.

'Twas evening and the moon had ris'n, the tea things had been cleared away,
And, dozing in her great arm chair beside the fire, my grandam lay,
The kitten purred upon the rug, old Bose lay on the hearth, when, hark!
A sound rang through the list'ning air, and Bose jumpt up and 'gan to bark—

Chorus.—While still unconscious grandam snored,
And still the dozing tabby purred,
And we sat motionless and still,
As though no passing sound we'd heard
But—click! click! click!

Still wore the minutes while the clock kept ticking in the passage
The evening breeze went whisp'ring by, and chirped the crickets loud and clear;
So calm the hour, that we the beat of our own hearts might plainly mark,
When once again the sound rang out, and Bose jumpt up with warning bark—

Chorus.—While still, etc.

The hand was pressing fast on twelve, and now the moon beyond
Was sinking to her nightly rest, and I stood lingering on the sill;
A gentle form my fond arm pressed, our cheeks were touching in the dark;
Again that mystic sound uprose, and Bose most fiercely 'gan to bark—

Chorus.—While still, etc.

CHANFRAU'S FIRST PERFORMANCE OF MOSE.

Through the kindness of Mr. B. F. Baker, the veteran stage manager, we are enabled to present to our readers a copy of the benefit bill of Mr. Baker, at Mitchell's Olympic, when a local sketch entitled "A Glance at New York in 1848," written by the beneficiary, was performed for the first time. Mary Taylor, the popular soubrette of the company, was ill at that time, and consequently no character was written for her; Mr. Chanfrau, though suffering from brain fever, enacted the since renowned character of Mose. The sketch was performed for a long run of weeks in five scenes. Mr. Baker was paid $25 for the piece, and Mr. Mitchell offered him the same amount to rewrite the sketch and introduce a character for Miss Mary Taylor, which was accepted. We have incorporated into the bill below the additional characters introduced four weeks subsequent to its original production.

LEWIS HALLAM.

ORDWAY'S ÆOLIAN VOCALISTS.

The following interesting memento of Boston minstrelsy has been kindly contributed by one of the pioneers of minstrel entertainments in Massachusetts, John F. Ordway, M. D., who, some twelve years ago, retired from the stage to devote his time and attention to the study and practice of medicine and surgery in Boston. It will be seen that Neil and Jerry Bryant and Jubilee Gilmore were members of the troupe:—

SHE IS No. 1.

BY "BLONDE."

I've just been down my love to see—her heart it all belongs to me,
My soul is filled with ecstacy, for Katie's surely mine;
She's the rarest of the rare—aweetw there are none,
And the fairest of the fair; oh, she is No. 1.

Chorus.—Gracefully she dances, merrily she sings,
Pretty as a peach and full of fun;
Whenever I am with her, I'm happy as a king,
For she is No. 1.

I met her in the Central Park—we rambled round till nearly dark;
Says she, "I now for home must start," so I offered her my arm;
She took it, thanked me kindly, and gently whispered, "come."
'Twas then and there I christened her my little No. 1.

Chorus.—Gracefully she dances, etc.

When parting at the cottage gate, I own 'twas growing rather late,
I kissed my own, my darling Kate; she sweetly said adieu.
For I had asked her to be mine till life's short race was over;
To which she softly murmured, yes, did my little No. 1.

Chorus.—Gracefully she dances, etc.

"BABIL AND BIJOU;
OR,
THE LOST REGALIA."

BY DION BOUCICAULT AND J. R. PLANCHE.

A fantastical spectacular drama, bearing the above title, was produced at Covent Garden Theatre, London, Eng., on Thursday evening, Aug. 29th. Concerning it we excerpt the following from the Daily Telegraph, of Aug. 30th:—

The first question to be asked this morning by many lips will be, "Was 'Babil and Bijou' a success?" We doubt if there will be one hand held up antagonistic to the popular verdict declaring the fantastic fairy drama to be one of the most gorgeous and elaborate stage spectacles witnessed by any play goer, old or young. We question if a single individual would attempt to combat the decision emphatically pronounced by an overwhelming house patiently remaining from seven o'clock until midnight to be dazzled by scene after scene of splendor, to be amazed with such properties and decorations as have never before been produced, to be delighted with a fanciful legend, pleasant music, and elaborate costume, and to marvel how such a work could have been brought to such a point of elaborate beauty. * * * It must be remembered this fairy drama is like nothing that has been seen on the stage before, and is superior in meaning and magnificence to the fairy pieces of Paris as it is triumphantly in advance of the silly, pointless and witless entertainments called burlesques. The "Riche au Bois" and spectacles of that class can hardly be compared with "Babil and Bijou;" for there is an intention here, a significance and a meaning extending down to the very smallest detail. And the fairy drama has one conspicuous advantage over its Paris orgimasiors which cannot fail to be appreciated by the public. From one end to another there is not a trace of indecency, fastness, vulgarity, or bad taste. The dancers are ladies who consider dancing as an art, and there is a certain poetry and delicacy in their movements which make it a mind gratifying to behold them in the same breath with those who consider they have acquired sufficient notoriety when they have flung their legs higher and taken off more clothing than any of their sex.

The story of the plot is given as follows by the Sunday Times:—Human destinies are once more interwoven with those of the denizens of Fairyland. Avoiding the cursed darlings of her own race, Melusine, Queen of Elfinland, has chosen for herself a mortal. From her marriage with this child of earth has sprung a daughter, who in solitude has grown into beauty such as might be expected from her origin. Over the fate of this child Melusine is unable to watch. Her sweetheart has cost her her liberty and her power. Imprisoned in a ruby, and caverned in deepest recesses of the earth, she waits until some rescue shall be afforded by friendly allies, and knows sadly her throne is filled by Skepsis, the ill-conditioned monarch of the Gnomes, and Pragma, his queen. The fairy regalia, too, has been stolen and hidden. Until they are again brought together, and to the task of keeping them separate the entire talent of Skepsis and Pragma is devoted, the resumption of Melusine of authority is impossible. Though separated from her mother, Bijou has not hitherto played badly her cards. Her beauty and innocence have won the affections of Prince Phanfilla, whom, however, she only knows as Babil, a shepherd. For her sake Babil renounces graciously a throne it was not very easy for him to keep, the Communists having rendered wholly intolerable a maintenance of the seat of his fathers. On the eve of the romantic shepherd's peasant costume, accompanied only by Auricomos, a strange being, half priest, half deity, who has shared his fall and his flight. Not without protest is another child of fairy race allowed to link its destiny with that of mortals. Ere the marriage rites of Babil and Bijou are performed, Skepsis and Pragma appear to Bijou and urge her to accept a throne in Fairyland. If she will do this they will release her mother. Summoned for awhile from her cave, Melusine refuses to second the advice of her enemies, and urges her daughter to constancy in love. After her stately visitors have disappeared, Bijou is surprised by a voice from the cricket on the hearth. From this she learns that the cricket is Mistigris, the spirit of the earth, whom the fall of Melusine has condemned to this shape. Acting on her directions, Babil sets him free, and furnishes him with a friend for life. Two acts and a prologue have been spent in bringing matters thus far. What remains is, so far as story is concerned, wholly unimportant. It is a mere vehicle for spectacular splendor. In search of Bijou, Babil and Bijou, accompanied by Mistigris and Auricomos, descend to various haunts of monsters terrestrial and marine. At one time they are at the fountain of the River of Life and see the descent of man through all stages of development, from the ape primeval to the latest and most civilised type, Lord Dundreary. Again the caverns of the Octopus are visited, and the dreary mooners of the deep are seen in their groves and halls of coral. In the enchanted garden, the princesses and fruits, following the example of mankind, have revolted against the flowers, and would succeed in throwing off their sweet and beneficent bondage but for the opportune help of bees, who swarm to the aid of their allies. All this is seen by the wanderers, who subsequently witness a ballet illustration of the changing seasons of the year. During all these courses the constant hostility of Skepsis and Pragma to the lovers is manifested, however, the aid of his sister spirits of water and air, and to this it is owing that all the machinations of the enemies of the lovers come to nought. To the last named of these spirits the lovers are indebted for power to visit the regions of mid air, and thus to reach the mountains of the moon. Once arrived in Moonland they find it at or rather, ascertain that some decision which in the world have remained in the speculative stage have in that world proceeded to the practical. "Of the 'Garden of the Four Seasons' we may say that a more beautiful has never been represented on the stage, the scene painter's art having skillfully combined the most charming beds of flowers, the living figures, and the fairy forms, who danced in the waters of a sparkling fountain, while beyond are the green fields and, still further on, the hills dying away in the distance. It is spring; everything looks fresh and lovely, a troupe of merry Youths and Sporting Fairies take part in the opening chorus, 'gentle spring' in a style which took the audience by storm, and led to an irresistible demand for a repetition. But summer is gradually approaching; the flowers are now in the fulness of their beauty, and the fields ripen, and that the bees are busy we soon discover when the corps de ballet, representing the honey gatherers, come trooping in. Another mechanical, but seemingly natural, transformation, and lo! it is autumn. The standing corn gives place to the golden grain, and the brilliancy of the flowers is fading. Here is introduced a ballet of Italian and Spanish characters, headed by Mdles. Henriette Dor, Travaille, Lavigne and Winchahl, who, as usual, themselves accomplished mistresses of the Terpsichorean art, and who were rewarded with prolonged applause and with bouquets innumerable. And now winter is upon us. Not without protest is another child of fairy race allowed to link its destiny with that of mortals. Ere the marriage rites of Babil and Bijou are performed, Skepsis and Pragma appear to Bijou and urge her to accept a throne in Fairyland. If she will do this they will release her mother. Summoned for awhile from her cave, Melusine refuses to second the advice of her enemies, and urges her daughter to constancy in love. After her stately visitors have disappeared, Bijou is surprised by a voice from the cricket on the hearth. From this she learns that the cricket is Mistigris, the spirit of the earth, whom the fall of Melusine has condemned to this shape. Acting on her directions, Babil sets him free, and furnishes him with a friend for life. Two acts and a prologue have been spent in bringing matters thus far. What remains is, so far as story is concerned, wholly unimportant. It is a mere vehicle for spectacular splendor. In search of Bijou, Babil and Bijou, accompanied by Mistigris and Auricomos, descend to various haunts of monsters terrestrial and marine. At one time they are at the fountain of the River of Life and see the descent of man through all stages of development, from the ape primeval to the latest and most civilised type, Lord Dundreary. Again the caverns of the Octopus are visited, and the dreary mooners of the deep are seen in their groves and halls of coral. In the enchanted garden, the princesses and fruits, following the example of mankind, have revolted against the flowers, and would succeed in throwing off their sweet and beneficent bondage but for the opportune help of bees, who swarm to the aid of their allies. All this is seen by the wanderers, who subsequently witness a ballet illustration of the changing seasons of the year. During all these courses the constant hostility of Skepsis and Pragma to the lovers is manifested, however, the aid of his sister spirits of water and air, and to this it is owing that all the machinations of the enemies of the lovers come to nought. AQUATICS.

"The custom there to overthrow Whatever has been wisely done below;"

SIX-OARED GIG RACE AT ALBANY.
The Mutuals Gain a Victory over the Beaverwycks.

Some time ago, it will be recollected, the Beaverwyck Rowing Club, of Albany, N. Y., issued a challenge, in which they offered to row the Mutuals, of the same city, and a club of much renown, a series of races, six-oared gig, six-oared shell, double scull and single scull. The Mutes promptly accepted the challenge as far as the six-oared races were concerned, deferring action upon the others until some future time. On Monday, Sept. 9th, the rival oarsmen met to contend for superiority in gigs, over a three mile course, straightaway. The weather was delightful, the water in suitable condition, and a vast concourse of people gathered to witness the struggle between the crack amateur crews of the upper Hudson. The Mutuals were not very hopeful of achieving the victory, and the Beaverwycks being considered superior to them in gigs, betting ruled at odds of $100 to $80, and in some instances as high as $160 to $80 on the latter. The crews were as under:—

Alexander Kennedy, Beaverwyck club:—Wm. A. Norman, bow, 160 lbs.; Alonzo B. Cooley, 151 lbs.; Geo. B. Cooley, 151 lbs.; Phil. H. Myers, 165 lbs.; W. J. Gorsuch, 138 lbs.; Jas. Wilson, stroke, 155 lbs.; W. R. Mills, coxswain. Boat 45 feet long, 31 inches wide. Colors, white and blue.

Thomas H. Greer, Mutual Club:—James A. Shattuck, bow, 149 lbs.; Charles Pipenbrink, 138 lbs.; Wm. S. Moseley, 139 lbs.; James Brown, 165 lbs.; H. H. Wygant, 148 lbs.; Alonzo P. Adams, 159 lbs.; E. E. Foster, coxswain. Boat, 45 feet long, 19 inches wide; shaved from a shell. Colors, crimson and white.

On the word being given both crews caught the water at the same instant, but No. 5 of the Beaverwycks missed a stroke, and the Mutual boat was first under way. The Beaverwycks, however, immediately fell into a long stroke, and rapidly went to the fore, securing, in less than a minute, a lead of half a length, which, a few hundred yards further on, was increased to a clear length. The Mutuals were rowing rather raggedly for some time after the start, and their boat rolled considerably; but by the time half a mile had been traversed they fell nicely together, and responding admirably to the rapid but splendid stroke of Adams, maintained their position on the stern quarter of the Beaverwyck boat, and were not to be shaken off. A very fine race for another half mile followed, the relative positions of the boats scarcely ranging ten feet in that distance, with the Beaverwycks leading by now a length and now three-quarters. The stroke of the Mutuals, although not lacking in power, was very quick, running from forty to fifty per minute; while their opponents confined themselves to thirty-eight at the start, and thirty-two through the major part of the race. When a mile of the course had been passed, Greer slowly but surely drew upon the leading boat, to the coxswain of which her sharp nose soon made its unwelcome appearance, then slipped up to the quarter, and, in two minutes more, took the lead by a foot and bow. Now Wilson calls upon his men, who have been apparently rowing well within themselves, for that spurt which all who have watched them on practice confidently expected of them when it was needed; but though they pulled determinedly and well, their rowing lacked spirit, and by the time the buoy, making a mile and a half of the course, was reached, the Mutuals had secured a lead of a length. From this point to the Bath ferry no change occurred, but at the latter point it became necessary for the Mutuals to cross to the west in order to shoot the draw of the old bridge, when they again put on a fine spurt, and, rowing forty-five strokes per minute, took the water of the Beaverwycks for the first time in the race. And now the plaudits of the immense crowds gathered in black masses on the wharves and covering both railroad bridges began to tell on the crews, and the boats flew over the remaining quarter of a mile at a terrific speed. The Beaverwycks had passed through the upper bridge two lengths astern, but, making one more desperate effort to turn the fortunes of the day, rushed up to their opponents in a dangerous looking manner; their effort, however, came too late, and the Mutuals passed the winning post victors in the finest race ever rowed in those waters in the excellent time of 17 min. 38 secs., their rivals being but three seconds behind. The judges were Messrs. Adams, Grout and Wright, and the referee, Mr. W. P. Walsh, of the Oneida Club, of Jersey City.

ATTEMPT TO SWIM ACROSS THE STRAITS OF DOVER.

On Saturday, August 24th, J. B. Johnson, of Leeds, Eng., attempted to swim from Dover to Calais, for a wager, but failed most lamentably, accomplishing but seven miles, when he had to be taken on the steamer Palmerston, which accompanied him. The time in which the seven miles is said to have been swam was one hour and five minutes, the first two being done in twenty minutes, which Bell's Life ridicules, saying that a good swimmer, in perfectly still water, would take about thirty minutes to compass a mile. To this statement we must take exception, however, for we have a record of Isaac Davis, of Berwick, O., having swam eight miles in the Sciota river, down stream, in one hour and thirty-five minutes, in September, 1869. Bell's Life goes on to say that, "in the sea we have only to take as a proof of our assertion the time Cavill, the champion of the South Coast (a first-class swimmer) swam a mile in a race on Saturday last, off Brighton, which was 31 minutes. The longest swim we can vouch for was on the 16th of September, 1865, for a gold medal offered by the original London Swimming Club, the stipulations being that the competitor who could complete the greatest distance in the Thames, without assistance either in the way of refreshment or otherwise, should win the trophy. Of the fifteen leading swimmers of the day who started from Teddington Lock on that occasion only two reached Barnes—W. Wood, of Huddersfield and C. Whyte, soon after which the latter was taken out of the water in an insensible state, but Wood could have swam a greater distance had there been any necessity, having completed eight miles and a quarter—of course with the tide—and his time was 3h. 16m. 40sec."

The Lancet, a high medical authority, speaks as follows concerning the attempt:—"Given a young, vigorous man, measuring 45 inches round the chest, and capable of expanding it to 50, full of buoyant vitality, and skilled in all the art of the swimmer, and the task of finding his way across a tract of sea 22 miles broad does not appear insuparable. It was the exceptional conditions of the attempt that outdid the strength of this Yorkshireman. The distance was nearly doubled by the necessity of dodging the tidal current. Then, again, the day was cold for the season, and the low temperature of the German Ocean at all times was not counted on. So that after seven miles had been traversed in superb style, the swimmer had to call for refreshments; and the call was repeated so often that the surgeon on board the umpire's steamer prevailed upon him to desist. On check Mr. Johnson complained of nothing but numbness; the heart's action was regular and strong, and the respiration was unimpaired. What he might have done in the tideless waters of the Mediterranean, with their higher temperature and with that chest of his like a swim-bladder, we cannot say. Doubtless his staying power would have been greater and his risk of cramp much less. As it is, his feat is worthy of record, not only as unprecedented of its kind, but as the earnest of what may one day be performed under less unfavorable conditions. Recourse to stimulants at the rate he required them must, of course, have accelerated his break down; but means of maintaining the temperature to the close are surely within the resources of science."

The British Medical Journal expresses the opinion that "continuous immersion for ten or twelve hours, the time demanded by Johnson to cross the channel, in water at about 60 deg Fahrenheit, the temperature of our seas, is in itself more than the human frame can undergo. It represents, in a large quantity of ever changing water, a constant extraction of forty degrees of heat from the body, which has a temperature of about 90 deg. Fahrenheit. The muscular power requisite to swim forty miles may probably be possessed by Johnson; but when this extra tax on the strength is demanded, the possibility of performing the feat without some very ingenious artificial means of keeping up the heat of the body is physiologically out of the question."

The Sporting Life discredits Johnson's sincerity in making the attempt, though it does not question the correctness of the time given, and says that the attempt "scarcely deserves to rank with some swimming races of late years, and particularly with one gallant swim for life which most swimmers are acquainted with. It is well known that Lord Byron rivaled Leander in his own particular water, and once swam four hours and twenty minutes for glory. On an October night in 1835 a Yarmouth fisherman named Brock was shipwrecked and swam seven hours and a half to save his life. Then, according to the Athenæum, one Dr. Dulk swam across Lake Constance, twelve miles wide, in six hours, in the summer of 1864. Couple these achievements with the gallant performance of Henry Coulter on August 27th, 1866, when this superb breast swimmer won his great match against a man of war's man by beating him by half an hour in a swim through a roughish sea from the mouth of the Medway round the Nore lightship—a swim which occupied Coulter one hour and three-quarters."

WORKING BOAT RACE.

A match for $100 a side, in four-oared working boats, between the Castletown crew, of Cambridge, and the Ballycotton, of Boston, Mass., was decided over the two-mile course on the Charles river on the 12th inst. The Cambridge crew comprised M. Murphy (bow), D. Shea, C. Harrington and M. Harrington (stroke). The Boston crew were James Welch (bow), R. Morrison, M. Colbert and M. Driscoll (stroke). The judges were John Coffee and Daniel Harrington at the upper stake, and M. P. Owens and J. Connell at the home boat. The referee was John Curtis. The water was in good condition, though the glaring sun was of great inconvenience to the rowers, particularly on the home stretch, and resulted in a disaster which seriously damaged both boats. The start was a good one, the boats getting into line and being given the word at 20 minutes past 4 o'clock. The Harrington crew gained the lead upon their shell at the start and maintained it to the stake-boat were some three lengths ahead. They had rounded the stake and fairly commenced to come down the course, when the Ballycottons accidentally ran into them, striking the gunwale of the Cambridge boat about midships a powerful blow, splitting the side open. The other boat broke off about a foot of her bow, allowing her to fill immediately. Notwithstanding the accident the Cambridge crew pulled home, making the race in 17 minutes and 30 seconds. They were awarded the stakes. The other crew came home in another boat some time afterwards, having their own boat in tow. It was said that the cause of the accident was by reason of the Boston crew not seeing their opponents in season to prevent a collision.

HARLEM REGATTA ASSOCIATION.—At a meeting of the delegates representing the boat clubs located on the banks of the Harlem river held on the evening of September 9th, at Earle's Hotel, a permanent organization for the establishment of an annual regatta was effected. Delegates were present from the Gramercy, Nassau, Athletic, Dauntless and Nautilus Clubs. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and approved, Mr. J. C. Babcock, of the committee on constitution and by-laws, made his report, which was accepted. After a lively debate the name of the organization was altered from Harlem Navy to Harlem Regatta Association, the Gramercy and Nautilus Clubs voting against the change. An election of officers resulted as follows:—president, J. C. Babcock, of the Nassaus; vice president, Eugene Earle, Athletic; secretary and treasurer, R. L. Neville, Nautilus; director —J. A. Shute, Gramercy, and J. McCarthy, Dauntless.

AT LAKE AINSLIE.—A match was made at Worcester, Mass., on the 12th inst., for $100 a side, the somewhat unusual terms of which are that J. J. O'Leary cannot pull over a surveyed course of three miles, on Lake Quinsigamond, in 23 min. 30 secs; or, if a full course cannot be obtained there, then the race is to take place on the Ingleside course at Springfield. The date of the race is set down for Thursday the 26th inst. The event no doubt will elicit considerable interest among the aquatic fraternity generally, the old scythe bearer having a little the best of the call in betting, as 22:20 is considered rather speedy sculling, 22:37 being the fastest time yet recorded.

THE ANNUAL REGATTA of the South Boston Yacht club is fixed for Sept 19th, off South Boston Point, starting at 11 o'clock A. M.

THE DETROIT BOATING ASSOCIATION held their first international regatta on Lake St. Clair on Sept. 4th, over a course thirty miles in length, the following boats starting:—Restless, of Sandusky; Blue Bonnett, Phaon, Fleetwing, Lalla Rookh, Collins, Lena and Coral, of Detroit; Phantom and Mystic, of Cleveland; Ida, of Sandusky; K. C. Barker, of Toledo, and Ina, of Toronto. The latter vessel, which was built by P. McClehan, of Pamrapo, N. J., won easily by 40 minutes.

THE FOUR-OARED SHELL RACE between the Argonauta Rowing Association, of Bergen Point, N. J., and the Neptunes of West Brighton L. I., over the three mile straight away course in the Kills, took place on the 16th inst., but the result had not reached us up to the hour of going to press.

THE SCHOONER yacht Enchantress arrived at this port on Sept. 11th, from Cowes, Isle of Wight.

BASE BALL.

THE "REDS" IN BALTIMORE.

The Boston's visited Baltimore Sept. 10th, to play their fifth game with the "Yellows," of that city, but owing to the previous rains the grounds were not in condition for a regular contest. A large crowd being present and a game called for, the two nines played a practice game with the appended result. At the very outset the Yellows punished the Reds to the tune of 10 to 4. Harry Wright then went in to pitch, and in the next four innings the Yellows scored but 2 runs, while the Reds batted in every innings for runs until they had equalled their opponents' score. By this time a drizzling rain had soaked the players, and as the score stood at 12 to 12, the game was called. The score is as follows:—

THE REGULAR CHAMPIONSHIP GAME.

On the following day, Wednesday, 11th inst, they played their regular championship game, which is reported as having been close and interesting, though not very skilfully played, owing to the very moist condition of the grounds and threatening weather, the arena looking more like a circus ring than a ball field, from the quantity of sawdust that had to be strewn to prevent slipping. Some 3,000 persons, including many ladies, were there as spectators, and the clerk of the weather favored them by withholding the rain till the match was ended. Mr. Beales, of the Washingtons, was elected umpire, whom the American considers as having been inefficient in calling balls. At 5.45 P. M., the contending nines were ready to commence

THE GAME.

The Baltimores went first to the bat, against Spalding's pitching and McVey's catching. Radcliff, the first striker, reached first on a muff stop of Geo. Wright's, but was forced at second on Higham's hit to Spalding, the next two hands flying out to Harry Wright and Gould. The Bostons also drew a blank, although an error of Carey's gave them a base, and Leonard, by a safe hit, had reached first. The second innings resulted in another blank for the Baltimores, Matthews alone reaching his base, and that on a fair foul hit, and the Bostons scored their first run, errors by Fisher and Carey preventing a blank. In the third innings Carey furnished the first hand out on a hit to Leonard; Radcliff hit safely for a base, and Higham followed for a two baser clear over Harry Wright's head; then Force reached first on a misjudged fly to Harry Wright, Radcliff and Higham scoring, and Pike came all the way to third on a muff of Gould's and a bad throw of Rogers', Force scoring. Matthews furnished Birdsall's fly in left field, which was decided the striker coming to second on Mills' hit to Gould, Pike being York furnishing the third hand out on a fly to Schaffer. The Bostons went out in one, two, three order. Then the Baltimores took up the wicket for the fourth innings, but the first two hands were retired, and the third should have been but for a bad throw of George Wright's. Then Higham reached first on a safe hit, and came to third on a muff stop of Rogers'; Force sent Radcliff home on another safe hit, and Pike, Higham home on a good hit, the striker being left on Matthews' foul fly to Gould. Six to one was a good lead for the Baltimores, but as the Bostons scored four runs in this innings, the aspect of affairs was altered. Spalding, the first striker, furnished a fly to Carey, which was accepted, then Gould made a safe hit and Shaffer reached first on a low throw of Force's to Carey. Rogers hit a liner to right field, which was clearly a foul ball, but the umpire thought differently, the striker taking two bases and Gould scoring. George Wright should have been the third hand out for a muff of Mills', Schaffer scoring, Birdsall's safe hit sending home Rogers and George Wright. In the fifth innings Harry Wright went in to pitch, Spalding taking centre field, McVey right and Birdsall behind the bat. The change gave another blank to the Baltimores, although he made a safe hit, but was put out afterwards on a throw of Harry Wright's to Gould, the very close decision of the umpire giving great dissatisfaction to the crowd, which behaved in a disgraceful manner by hooting and yelling. The Reds got the range of Fisher in this innings and pounded him for two runs, earning four first bases and but one run, a passed ball giving them the other. On the sixth innings the Baltimores were blanked in the order of striking, and as Matthews took pitcher's position (but only an innings too late) the Bostons were also treated with a goose egg. In the seventh, Pike, after waiting until a half dozen balls had struck in front of the home plate, and only two had been called, hit at a ball entirely too low and of course was retired. Matthews, Mills and York then put in safe hits, the former scoring the only run and the Reds scored one run on a bad throw of Higham's to Carey, thus getting the lead again. In the eighth and ninth innings both sides were blanked, Harry Wright and Mills being the only ones to make base hits, and the result gave the game to the Reds by a score of eight to seven. Leonard was about the only man on the Boston side not credited with errors, and also led the batting score. On the side of the yellow legs, Pike, York and Matthews were the only ones free from errors, Pike's score being the lead to play, twice interfering with Force in his efforts to stop hits, twice stopping balls thrown in from the outfield to Higham, which might have retired hands, and twice knocking fouls when York had started from first to second base in his effort to draw a throw from Birdsall in order to let in a man on third base. The score:—

BOSTON vs. MUTUAL.

The eighth game of the championship series between these clubs was played on the Union grounds, Brooklyn, L. I., on Sept. 12th, in the presence of two or three thousand people; and after an exceedingly close and interesting contest, the Mutuals came out of the conflict creditable victors, by a score of 3 to 2 of scored runs, and 1 to 0 of earned runs, the match proving to be one of the best played in fielding of the whole series between the two nines. The Bostons were minus the services of Barnes, whose ability to punish Cummings has been a batting feature of the Reds' play in every one of the previous contests. In the field Leonard played Barnes' position so finely that in that department he was not missed at all. The Mutuals had out their full nine, and all but Hatfield played well, the "blonde" getting too excited towards the close, especially for a captain.

The game opened in favor of the Mutuals by a score of 2 to 0, Eggler and Hatfield leading off with first base hits. By a bad throw in of the ball Hatfield hit to Rogers, Eggler scored his run, Bechtel's hit sending in Hatfield, who had got to 3d on Rogers' high throw. A fine double play by George Wright and Leonard to Gould ended the innings, one run being earned. From this time up to the seventh innings the fielding was very sharp on both sides, each man making but 4 base hits. In the 4th and 6th innings the Reds had two men on earned bases, the Mutuals getting earned bases on the 3d, 4th and 5th innings, but before either could get a run in, the side was put out, the 6th innings closing with the score at 2 to 0 in favor of the New Yorkers. In the 7th innings the Reds again got two men on bases by good hits, but an easy chance for a catch prevented them from scoring. On the Mutual side, however, a run was scored, a two base hit by Cummings—after McVey had missed him on a foul fly—George Wright's solitary error giving the Mutes an unearned run.

When the Reds went into their eighth innings the score stood at 3 to 0 against them, and as their two first strikers retired in succession things began to look very "Chicagoish" for them. Just at this time McVey came in to the rescue with a fearful hit for one base, and as Spalding hit safely to left field, two men were for the fourth time on earned bases. Gould now hit a hot low liner, which Pearce tried in vain to hold, and as he also failed to stop the ball, Gould had a life given him at first, and Spalding at second. Now it was that Schafer made the hit that saved the Reds from a trip to "Chicago," his safe hit to left field sending in McVey and Spalding on unearned runs. When Rogers went to the bat two men were on bases, and things looked promising for two more runs and a won game, but Rogers succumbed to Cummings' strategy, and run getting in the contest ceased, neither party scoring in the last innings.

Of the play, the splendid fielding of Leonard at second base was the feature on the Boston side, he and Gould bearing off the palm for fine fielding, a stop and throw made by Leonard of an apparently safe grounder from Pearce's bat eliciting loud applause. Schafer also played well in this game, a catch of a hot liner in the fourth innings by him being noteworthy. Spalding's pitching was very effective after the first innings, not a run being earned, and but one scored after that. In batting, Spalding took the lead, McVey and Harry Wright also batting well. The Reds scored ten first base hits to the Mutuals' 8, but they did not tell so well in the scoring of runs. A wild throw by Rogers, a muff by Geo. Wright, and two missed foul balls by McVey, gave the Mutuals two uncarned runs, a dropped low ball by Pearce saving the Reds from a whitewash in the eighth innings. The Mutual play, that of Pearce with the one exception was noteworthy, good catches being made by Cummings, Start, Fulmer and Eggler. Indeed, all played well. In batting, Hatfield took a decided lead.

We noticed that some roughs hissed Harry Wright when he made a successful safe hit, yet when Pearce or any of the Mutuals tried the fair foul hitting it was considered all right. A fair foul ball is one of the most difficult hits to make in base ball, as it requires considerable nerve and keen sight; the splendid hits in the out-field, so highly regarded by the juveniles, are easy hits in comparison. A muffin batsman can make a home run hit, provided a good ball is sent him, but no muffin can hit a "fair foul." To draw in the 3d baseman and short field for a fair foul hit, and then to pop a ball over their heads fair, is one of the most skilful bits of batting strategy we know of. In pitching, a play of Spalding's was noteworthy, and that is the skill with which he returns a ball to the batsman before he is in form again for hitting after striking. This is a strong point for a pitcher to play. Only one error of the Mutuals told against them in the score, while three on the other side gave the Mutuals two runs. The score should have been 1 to 0 in favor of the Mutuals. The game was finely umpired by Burdock, who now ranks second to none for impartial and correct umpiring. The score is as follows:—

ATLANTIC vs. ECKFORD.

These leading candidates for the co-operative championship played their second game together on Sept. 11th, at the Capitoline grounds, L. I., and, as they had made such a good fight in the first game, a good crowd were gathered to witness the return match. This time, however, the Eckfords unwisely played short handed, neither Andy Allison, Wood or Zettlein being in their team, and, as a lively ball was used, the game turned out to be the very reverse of the previous match, and quite tediously and poorly played. The score below gives the particulars:—

THE PUTNAMS IN TOWN.

Last week Mr. Putnam wrote us word that the old Haymakers had been reorganized, and that they would visit New York September 9th, the nine, he stated, including Barker, McAtee, Flynn, the Kings and others of the old Haymaker team. On Tuesday, Sept. 10th, an assemblage of spectators gathered on the Union grounds, Brooklyn, to see what promised to be a rather interesting game between the Mutuals and the so called reorganized Haymakers. Greatly to the surprise of the Mutes, however, the nine who took the field against them proved to be only the Putnams. Of course a one-sided contest was the result, as the appended score shows. Experimental gate money teams are played out. It will not do to present any but first class nines now in the professional arena, and even then there must be something worth contesting for between the two, or few will go to the match. The score is as follows:—

THE CALIFORNIA CHAMPIONSHIP.
The Empires Defeat the Crescents by One Run Only.

The third and deciding game for the California amateur championship between the Empire and Crescent clubs took place on the Recreation grounds, San Francisco, on the 1st inst., when, after some skillful play on both sides, the Empires gained the victory by one run only, having saved an almost lost cause by scoring three runs and whitewashing their opponents in the ninth and last innings. The score:—

RESOLUTES vs. HALLOCKS.

These eastern clubs, the former of Portland and champions of Maine, and the latter of Worcester, Mass., played a match on the 12th inst., at Worcester, in which the good Resolutions of Portland prevailed, as the appended score exhibits:—

ON HIS RETURN TRIP.—Andrew Peck, of that enterprising base ball emporium, Peck & Snyder, 126 Nassau street, who has been absent on a business and pleasure tour to Europe for the past two months, was to have left Liverpool, Eng., for New York on the 7th inst. Mr. Peck has made quite extensive arrangements for the importation of sporting goods, and his vim and energy ought to insure commensurate success for his outlay.

CRICKET.

MANHATTAN vs. STATEN ISLAND.

The return match between these clubs was played on the Manhattan grounds on Wednesday, Sept. 11th, and as the weather was fine, an enjoyable day's play was had. Both clubs presented good elevens, and some very fair cricket was shown during the contest. The Manhattans went to the bat at 11.45 A. M., sending in Ronaldson and McDougal to the bowling of Brewster and Gallagher, but the latter was replaced by Perkins after the first over. These two scored 13 before they were parted, Ronaldson retiring for 7, marked by a 4 to leg over the fence. Kensley was next, but he was put on the fence after a few overs, and temporarily retired. On the meaning plans, Jackson, Bly and Oakley appeared at the wickets in succession, the latter two getting duck eggs. McDougal all this time had batted well, and he had run up 33, when Brewster took his balls, his wicket, the 8th, falling for 39, two threes marking his score. Bance and Tyler now got in well together, and before they were parted they had run the score up to 71, of which the veteran obtained 20, marked by seven twos. He was well caught by Brewster, one of the latter taking the majority of wickets. Keiller took Tyler's place and displayed some pretty cricket, the 8th wicket falling for 85, of which Keiller contributed 18, in which were two threes and four twos, his hitting noteworthy. Bance had scored 29, marked by two threes and six twos, when Perkins took the stumps, the 9th wicket falling for 119. H. Tucker afterwards carried his bat out for the last wicket falling for 127. After dinner the Staten Islanders went in against the bowling of Ronaldson and Kensley, and as they were both on the spot, and were finely supported in the field, such a slaughter of the Island innocents as then took place has never before been witnessed. In fact, Perkins was the only player who made anything of a stand in the first innings, and he only scored 4, the whole eleven retiring in less than an hour for 19 runs. Bishop's not allowing a bye to be scored. The fielding was really a treat, the hot ones being stopped in handsome style, and thrown in with unwonted accuracy. Of course the Islanders followed their innings, and in their second played with more effect at the bat, Lawrence handling the wiflow to the tune of 17 runs, marked by six good twos; McKean carrying his bat out for 8. Jackson made a beautiful catch with one hand in the innings, and the wicket were made by Bishop, Tyler and Bance, Tyler keeping wicket in lively style. In fact, the Manhattan Club were "around," and played one of the best games of the season. The score is as follows:—

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Sept. 16th, '72.

"There is music in the air," which is more than can be said of every air; and there is likewise a coolness in the air, which admonishes us that we have at last felt the wind-up of the hot air which has so long kept us sweltering like boiled lobsters; but the music in the air we have reference to is that about which so much is being said in the journals of the day, which really seem at a loss how to classify or keep apart their remarks about the many celebrities with which this great and growing city is now afflicted. A glance through the columns of our contemporaries will detect many great personages mixed up together in one promiscuous mass; yea, here may be seen mention made of Lucca and Billy Forrester; Carlotta Patti and Reddy the Blacksmith; Mario and Moll the Gooseiens; Rubenstein and Foster the car hooker; Horace Greeley and Billy the Kid; Gen. Grant and Ned Stokes; Yates and Red Nosed Moll; and dozens of other celebrated characters each equally prominent in his or her own sphere of action. In fact, we have so many noted people to look after, now that "the melancholy days have come," that we are puzzled to tell which is deserving of the laudatory notices and commendations of the press and public!.....We helped to serenade Pauline Lucca, the newly-arrived Austrian soprano, at her residence in Fourteenth street, on Saturday night last, and we were amused at the remarks of some of the persons present, of which the following is a sample:—

Big Chap with a white hat.—Say, Buttsy, what's a goin' on here, any how; what's the row about?

Buttsy.—It's a serenade; don't you see the Dutch musicians?

Big Chap.—Well, who're they goin' to serenade, Horace Greeley?

Buttsy, in disgust.—No—o—o—it's a woman, Lucky, they call her; born in a garret without a stitch to her back, and not a soul nigh her.

Big Chap, with a laugh.—She was lucky to get out of such a mess. What's she do? What's her little game?

Buttsy.—She plays the fiddle, walks the tight rope, and they say she's hell on the banjo.

Big Chap.—Bully boy—shell do; I thought may be she was one o' them dam opra frauds. Where's she goin' to show at?

Buttsy.—I guess Tony Pastor's got her, for I see his Dutch orchestra here; and one of em's been grumblin' 'cause he has to play to-night for narthin; don't even git his beer.

Big Chap.—Well, all I know about it is that if they don't give 'em their beer there won't be no serenade—no Dutchman kin play without his logger.

Buttsy.—Here comes Tony—hay; hooray for Lucky.

And the two speakers were at once swallowed up in the surging crowd. And this is fame—converting a marvelous vocalist into a tight ropist and banjoist.....Some people are very ungrateful. Out there in Jacksonville, Illinois, Barnum's show was on exhibition, when all of a sudden, right before three thousand of Jacksonville's best villains, and without any provocation whatever, the Gorilla got mad that it was in a cage, and that it had to be overcoat much longer this hot weather for ten dollars a week." Now, we know this Gorilla, having been brought up in the same town with him, and we als› know that he gets twelve dollars a week and found. As the poet says:—

Oh, for a whip to place in every honest hand,
To lash the rascal, naked through the world.

"Our Jim" says a whip is very little to owe for in these days of wholesale stealing. He also sagely remarks that if a whip is only to be placed in every honest hand, the contractor that furnishes the whips won't make much money by the operation.....That story about a western arnust going to marry a dumb bell is all a sham, as there is not a word of truth in it. These yarns are nearly all originated at Greeley's Saturday clam bakes at Chappaqua. What a clamity it is that Horace was inveigled away from his editorial sanctum.....A green actor, just converted for a minister with a good salary, shows his ignorance by asking if the cannons of the church are what they call heaven's artillery. "Our Jim" squelches this liquid ambiguity with one broadside when he says, the cannons in the early ages were known as 'pistles to the rum 'uns, and yet Jim don't know much, either.....In view of the approaching American debut of Pauline the singist, bear with us, depraved friends, while we essay a few rhymes in token of our appreciation of the lady's condescension in visiting this western world just for our amusement:—

A DISTINCTION WITH A DIFFERENCE.

We've hit on a new prima donna,
Who, sooth to say, is somewhat plucky,
And when her friends would give her name
And state her case, they say she's lucky:
Some think her husband's got the best of it.
In fact it was for that he took her;
She takes the boys, gives him the rest of it—
He only wedded her for hers.

.....Europe is sending us quite a number of professional celebrities; so, as a partial return for these renewed favors, a quartette of our noted ones will sail on the 18th, for Albion's peaceful shores; they include Billy Edwards, Jimmy Mace, Barney Aaron and Pooley. Wonder why Dooney don't go along. When they arrive in England the boys intend to give a series of scientific exhibitions, in which they expect to make a hit. When Billy Edwards bit Chambers (which fact, didn't do, probably), Arthur gave him the second shoulder!.....Another celebration is to sell for fifteen cents a bushel. Daly's "Diamonds," "purer by far than pearls in the depths of the sea," fetch higher prices, as you may easily see by trying to get in at the Fifth Avenue Theatre..... There was a man named Gibboms—Doc. Gibbons they called him, because before going on the stage he cured corns, as it were. He longed to be an actor, even while curing down injurions anchors of corns; but he couldn't act worth a cent, and the boys gayed him off. His next strong pint—after his beer—was to become a preacher, a real pulpit orator, if we may be allowed to put it so boldly. He took first rate with the church women, for he had a good face, and plenty of black hair, and store teeth, and was hoeing his plous row as a hard-shell baptist right manfully when his prospects were blighted, as you shall see. When this retired actor's sands of life had run out on the stage, and his voice was heard in the tabernacles of the alleged holy ones, lo! he received an invitation to attend a "conference." This suited the pious Gibbons to an aispice, for he was dreadful fond of notoriety, so what's he do but get a suit, for his pulpit, owe for a new suit of black clothes, and with a carpet bag containing a new paper collar, brand new "confidence," and a ticket for his billet for Utica, New York, as you will understand. He was dead-headed on the railroad, and met with no accident, you will take notice. So when he left the train, the committee was in waiting for him. "Hello, Gibbay, git through all right?" "Doc, old boy, we're goin' to have a crowd for yer," and many similar implous-like remarks which our minister attributed to the religious freedom and custom of the church in Utica. This here pious committee then took hold of Gibbay, dumped him into a wagon, shying his delicate looking carpet bag right after him, and then, like educated mules or something, hitched on to that wagon, and with three cheers, toted the minister to a hotel, where he found clams, and pork and beans, and squash sass, and a real merry crowd, including several handsome girls, awaiting him. Gibbay's heart was made glad at the sight of so many good things, and he saw how greatly he had bettered himself in changing the stage for the pulpit, and it was natural, too; any of us would have thought the same, under the circumstances. You never, since the war, saw a man get away with victuals as Gibbay did. Clams disappeared like chaff before an equinoxial, and squash sass was an pushed up like it had gone the rounds of the Tombs. The minister looked right contented, and when wine was introduced, he was urged to take a thimbleful, so morality abstemious was this noble stranger, and by the time Doc. got through with his third bottle, he thought that this was about the jolliest party of church people he'd ever got in with. All that day the committee showed him around, and gave him things to drink, and made him just comfortable like. So when night shed its shadows athwart the dark sky," Gibbay, in a state of religious uncertainty as to his name and identity, found himself being led, like a sheep to the slaughter, onto the stage of the Utica Theatre. Something familiar in the atmosphere of the house recalled him to his senses, but it was only when he found himself flounderings among a swarm of fairy armed dancing girls that he comprehended the trick which some wicked actors, in retaliation for his pulpit attacks upon the profession, had played upon him; and when the curtain rose upon the second act of the "Black Crook" the house came down when "the reformed preacher" was discovered being made love to by the demon dancers. Gibbay got out of town that night, and soon after was introduced to "Ugo and Lina."..... Taking the green room gossip, inclines us to introduce a few lines, but for fear you may be induced to believe what we are about to say is really true, we beg to assure you that it is a "made up thing," a joke, intended to invoke a smile or two:—

A DREADFUL RUMOR.

What's this that's whispered in the green room?
Pettie an' Thorne's been a falling out
'Twixt William Horace and his help mate,
Okay, fairest madam, do not pout!
The report is, if you must know,
(And pray you do not think we're fibbing),
'Twixt them the fault divided be—
Mrs. Howard and she's always flooding.

City Summary.

NO TOMBSTONE OVER THE LATE GEORGE HOLLAND'S GRAVE.—The reasons why no monument has been raised over the remains of the late favorite comedian are set forth in the following letter from his eldest son, which, we think, fully answers a slur, possibly unintentional, cast upon his surviving relations in an article published in a recent issue, which we copied, with due credit, from the Brooklyn Eagle:—

20 East Forty-eighth street,
NEW YORK CITY, September 6th, 1872.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—In your paper of the 7th inst., an article appeared entitled "The Tombs of Actors," in which the writer mentions that "the actors of the country raised thousands of dollars for the family of the late George Holland, and yet there is no tombstone or symbol of sorrow to mark his grave," together with a few comments that seem to imply gross neglect on the part of his surviving family in not suitably marking his grave, after having received the "thousands of dollars" mentioned. As this is not the only instance where the public have been led to imagine that the family of the late George Holland are in possession of a fortune, I beg to append a short account of the manner in which the benefit funds were used. The "thousands of dollars" which were the proceeds of the benefits, were disposed of in such a manner by the committee charged with the duty, that the sum realized has resulted from the money. The actual proceeds were about $13,000. This sum, instead of being given to the widow, was invested in stocks, with the exception of $500 paid to Mrs. Holland at her urgent solicitation, the interest of which come received by the family is the interest on the investment, $600 per year, paid to the widow. George Holland left a widow and four children. The two eldest sons, George and Edmund, are actors, earning their own living. After them is their sister, and a young brother aged twelve. The widow and the two youngest children have to live upon $600 a year, excepting the assistance that the elder brothers are able to give, and, were it not for this help, twelve dollars per week is the sum on which three persons would have to subsist.

This is all the result of the great benefits for the widow and children of the late George Holland. The principal invested—which, if it were in the possession of Mrs. Holland, would enable her to live in comfort for the balance of her life—will be divided, at her death, among the children, who will not need it, in comparison with the present necessities of their mother. You will, therefore, perceive the reason of there being no tombstone over the grave of George Holland. As the article in your paper has caused considerable public comment, and a great deal of sorrow and regret in the family, may I beg you will favor this explanation a public expression, that the true circumstances may be properly understood. Very respectfully yours, GEORGE HOLLAND.

Eldest son of the late comedian.

[Properly invested, at the legal interest of seven per cent, the sum named should yield an annual income of nine hundred dollars, at least. In what stocks is the money invested?—ED. CLIP.]

THE FALL AND WINTER SEASON at Wood's Museum was inaugurated on Monday evening, Sept. 9th, with performances during the week, as well as the Saturday matinee, a burlesque extravaganza, in two acts, written by James Barnes, entitled "Chow Chow; or, a Tale of Pekin," was performed, with the Misses Lisa Weber, Pauline Markham, Belle Howitt, Emma Grattan and W. L. Mansell in the chief characters, supported by other members of the regular company, which was the same as during the past season, with the exceptions hitherto noted. The burlesque is not good, containing neither wit, proper rhymes, nor rythm. Each scene is independent of the others, and as for plot, it has none. The scenery was fair and the costumes were elegant. The music, with which the dialogue was liberally interspersed, was well rendered, and some few of the selections were encored, notable among which were the interpolated song, "Twilight in the Park," well sung by Miss Belle Howitt. The company labored conscientiously to make the piece a success, but the field for acting was limited. Miss Lisa Weber was cordially welcomed, and her musical efforts during the evening received signal recognition. Miss Emma Grattan, who made her first appearance there, deserves commendation. W. L. Mansell, although announced as "from the principal London, Eng., theatres," was very amateurish. He is something over six feet in height, and, clad in female attire, presented a grotesque appearance. He sings and dances fairly, and apparently relies more upon outre appearance than any inherent histrionic ability. The Misses Aggie Wood and Dollie Thorne likewise fresh accessions, made their debut, what little was required of them satisfactorily. The good attendance during the week proved that the patrons of the theatre were willing to support burlesque, and something more worthy of their patronage should be supplied. At the usual matinee performances "The Honeymoon" was acted, with T. W. Keene as the Duke Aranza.

AT BOOTH'S THEATRE fair sized audiences were attracted during the past week by the continued historic illustration of "The Bells." A slight change was made in the cast, owing to the departure of Mr. and Mrs. R. Pateman and James Rooney on a traveling tour, supporting Edwin Booth—Charles Rosine as Solomon; Miss Kate Heathcote as Margaret, and T. F. Brennan as Dr. Glauber, supplied their places.

A MUSICAL SOIRÉE was serenaded at the Clarendon Hotel on Thursday evening, Sept. 12th, by the Philharmonic orchestra, a compliment hitherto conferred by that body upon Jenny Lind only.

CARLOTTA PATTI, Teresa Carreno, Emile Sauret and Max Strakosch arrived from Europe on Sept. 12th.

THE PEABODY TROUPE will appear this evening with the Lydia Thompson troupe, opposite.

THE ATTENDANCE at all the places of amusement was visibly affected by the oppressive heat of Monday and the great political gathering in Union Square on Thursday evening of the past week.

"THE RED POCKET BOOK" was withdrawn from the boards of the Olympic Theatre after the performances of Saturday evening, Sept. 14th. On evening, the 14th, Miss Charlotte Thompson will re-appear in the society play, entitled "One Wife," which, it is said, has been revised.

CHARLEY SHAY intends opening the Thirty-fourth street theatre on or about Sept. 30th. J. H. Laine is to be the treasurer.

THE AVERAGE ATTENDANCE at the Grand Opera House was large during the week just closed. The charming vocal efforts of Miss Rose Hersee, the arch acting of Mrs. John Wood, the attractive performances of the Majilton family, combined with the beautiful scenery and costumes, are some few of the salient features which have accomplished that result.

TONY PASTOR has returned from his triumphant traveling tour, and will, this evening, Sept. 16th, re-open his opera house in the Bowery with one of the strongest companies in point of artistic merit that he has ever presented to his patrons. Tony is a prodigious favorite with the east side denizens, who will undoubtedly hail his return with rapture. The following is a list of the chief artists of the opening company:—The Misses Jennie Engel, soprano; Kittie Rice, dancer; Clara Brooks, protean artist and character vocalist, from London, Eng.; Celia Iferd, comedienne and vocalist; Marie and Amelia Gorenflo, dancers; Messrs. Tony Pastor, comic; Gus Williams, Dutch comique; Harrigan and Hart, duetists; Billy Carter, songs, with banjo obligato: Hen. Mason, Ethiopian comedian; Harry Kernell, delineator of aged plantation negroes; Johnny Manning, Ethiopian and Irish comedian; Frank Girard, versatile performer; Charles Seabert, actor, and an orchestra under the leadership of David Braham. Matinees are to be given every Tuesday and Friday.

MISS ANNIE ADAMS commenced a brief engagement at the Theatre Comique on Monday evening, Sept. 9th. Her serio-comic vocal efforts gave great satisfaction to those in attendance, as was evinced by their lavish applause. She possesses great vivacity, and is evidently in earnest with whatever she undertakes; at times, possibly, a little too much so, as she does not always modulate her voice to the size of the auditorium. The other novelty consisted of an entirely new dramatic sketch by that prolific author, John F. Poole, entitled "The New York EXPRESSman; or, The Stolen Child," which was favorably received. Among the attractive features of the programme may be mentioned serio-comic songs, by Mlle. Jennie Hughes; "The Dancing Octoroon," by Johnny Queen; and the statue clog, by the three Devere brothers; all of which were encored. In the sketch entitled "Divorce," John Hart proved himself one of the funniest of Ethiopian comedians, and Miss Kitty Tilston, who was elegantly attired in pink silk, acted Mrs. Brown quite naturally. This evening, Sept. 16th, Miss Kitty O'Neil, jig dancer; Jennie Benson, clog dancer; little Maggie Benson, inimitable song and dance; Frank Kerns, the popular Ethiopian comedian; Mackin and Wilson, double song and dance; and Robert Hall, negro comedian, are announced to appear.

THE FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE was filled during the past week. "Diamonds," notwithstanding its artistic defects, is proving a winning card, and now that the performers have become more accustomed to their various roles, the ensemble are not quite so apparent. The eye is pleased with the brilliant toilettes of the ladies, the beauty of the scenic effects, and the inanity of the small talk is thereby in a measure condoned.

JAMES KOBINSON'S CHAMPION CIRCUS commenced a series of exhibitions under canvas upon a lot at the corner of Madison avenue and Forty-fifth street, on Monday evening, Sept. 9th, which were continued every afternoon and evening during the week, attracting a good attendance at the matinees, whilst at the evening performances the canvas could not accommodate all that sought admission. The entertainments may be classed among the best ever given in this city. In the ensemble a wide departure was made from "the usual custom," instead of profusely spangled costumes and richly embroidered housings for the horses, which, by the way, generally conceal the condition of the animals, ten performers, clad in jockey costumes, consisting of boots with yellow tops, blue breeches, dark jackets trimmed with blue and caps to correspond, were mounted upon a like number of well conditioned horses wearing the common English riding saddle. This was followed by the excellent performances of George Derious upon the magic ladder. The Davenport brothers then gave contortion and gymnastic feats, which were distinguished for ease, grace, suppleness and agility. They are both worthy of a high rank in their profession. Master Clarence followed in a "bareback" act of horsemanship, which evinced much skill, careful training, and his tender years being considered, may be pronounced wonderful. During this act the clown, impersonated by Billy Burke, made his first appearance, and by his quaint sayings and grotesque actions, fairly convulsed the juvenile portion of the audience with laughter, whilst the elder portion gave expression to their pleasure in a less demonstrative manner. Shappee and Whitney performed a number of difficult and daring evolutions upon the flying trapeze, with grace and apparent ease. The air of confidence with which their performances were clothed dispelled all thoughts of fear from the minds of the spectators. Frank Pastor, one of the best pad riders of America, was heartily welcomed as he bounded into the arena clad in a rich and ornate costume, which tastefully combined our national colors. He is an easy, graceful rider, and accomplished the most wonderful tours de force and pirouettes without apparent effort. His somersaults over three banners placed at equi-distant points around the circle were accomplished without hindrance. During this act, Julian Kent made his first appearance with this show as clown. He was elegantly attired in a parti-colored dress of rich satin, profusely embroidered with gold bullion, the colors being light blue and yellow. He has a melodious voice and a very distinct enunciation, which added zest to his bon mots, many of which were fresh and original, while all were thoroughly enjoyable. A sensational act of tumbling introduced the entire gymnastic corps, and Billy Burke, the clown, who, besides performing some good gymnastic feats, created considerable humor by his burlesque imitations of the other performers. The feats of somersaulting, tumbling, etc., were above the general average, and each performer in friendly rivalry strived to outdo his brother. Master Clarence Robinson, clad in an English riding suit, rode an act upon his trick pony "White Fairy," which was one of the most pleasing of the programme. He looked a perfect picture of a man in miniature, and the fixed, determined air which wreathed his pretty, childish face, lent beauty to the scene. Mlle. Louise Bonfanti, a young lady with a well rounded form, clad in rich and elegant attire, a pretty face, performed a series of feats upon a slack wire which extended across the entire arena. Continued practice had enabled her to maintain her equilibrium upon that slight support, to walk thereon, and assume various attitudes with as much ease, apparently, as though upon the earth. Her graceful attitudes were characterized by grace. As James Robinson, the "champion bare back rider of the world," entered the ring, the applause was loud and long continued. When he bounded upon his highly mettled steed, and standing upon its back together they coursed the circle, the picture was beautiful. Both were typical of the highest state of physical development. Each seemed proud of the other's horsemanship, and as skilful a rider, the rider that he could place the firmest reliance upon his faithful steed. Taking his youngest son, Eugene, he posed him in various graceful attitudes, all of which evoked applause. He then vaulted over banners, turning graceful pirouettes, and terminated that portion of the performances by turning backward somersaults through a hoop, a feat of which he was the original performer. Master Clarence, then mounting the horse, was placed upon Mr. Robinson's head, where the little fellow stood erect and firm as a statue, without any other support than his feet, while the horse ran at rapid speed. After this, divesting the horse of surcingle and bridle, and urging him to his highest speed, Mr. Robinson performed a series of feats which have made his name famous in both hemispheres. He seemed to defy all laws of equilibrium, and to maintain a foothold where it seemed almost impossible to stand. Cheers from the entire audience rent the air during this portion of the performances, and after Mr. Robinson had retired from the ring he was re-called to again receive their approbation. Shappee and Whitney then performed some comic gymnastic feats which were well received, and the entertainment terminated with the performance of the riding dog, Phil. Sheridan, trained by Jas. Robinson. He leaped over banners, through balloons, alighted on a stationary platform erected for the purpose, remaining there whilst the horse made a circuit of the arena, and as he passed under the platform he again bounded upon his back. The dog evinces remarkable sagacity, and is perfect in his training. The circus will remain in its present location as long as business will warrant. The lot upon which it is located has been enclosed with a neat board fence, surmounted with gaslights, and as the location is conveniently reached by all the lines of horse cars and stages running to the Grand Central depot, we see no good reason why it should not continue to meet with liberal patronage. The daily matinee performances commence at half past two, and the evening at eight o'clock.

MME. AND MLLE. MAFFIT and dramatic company commenced a season of one week at the Academy of Music, on Monday evening, Sept. 7th, when "The Merchant of Venice" was acted, with the following cast:—

Shylock..... Mrs. Macready	Old Gobbo..... E. Carter
Duke of Venice..... S. Parker	Launcelot Gobbo.. H. C. Rynar
Antonio..... J. P. Sutton	Bassanio..... H. B. Smith
Bassanio..... E. R. Dalton	Balthazar..... R. Grace
Gratiano..... Milnes Levick	Portia..... Miss Alice Brooks
Lorenzo..... J. Nolan	Jessica..... Miss E. Dalton
Solanio..... J. V. Melton	Nerissa..... Miss Lizzie Gale
Salarino..... T. J. Nolan

Mrs. Macready has an excellent conception of the character of Shylock, but her embodiment thereof was not at all times satisfactory, the large size of the auditorium compelling her frequently to strain her voice, which impaired the fullness of tone so desirable. Her make-up was excellent, and her gait and gestures closely simulated those of the male sex. Her enunciation was clear and distinct, and she read the lines with a full comprehension of their meaning. During the trial scene she was seen to the best advantage. Her performance of that character, all things considered, was commendable. Milnes Levick acted with much spirit and vim throughout. The clear, bell-like tones of his voice fell upon the ear like liquid music, whilst his bearing was marked by courtly ease, and the entire impersonation evinced that he thoroughly understood the character. J. P. Sutton deserves credit for a good performance of Antonio. S. Parker, in the delivery of the lines assigned the Duke of Venice, was not happy. E. R. Dalton read the lines of Bassanio intelligently, but a little more animation in his make-up would be desirable. The lover of so fair a lady as Portia should have a comely person. L. H. Everitt acted Lorenzo fairly, as may be said of J. V. Melton as Solanio, and T. J. Nolan as Salarino. H. C. Rynar was somewhat lacking in humor as Launcelot Gobbo. E. Carter deserves praise for his make-up and acting of Old Gobbo, while Miss Alice Brooks gave a very creditable impersonation of Portia. She possesses both youth and beauty, and was costumed with much taste. Her reading of "the quality of mercy" was nearly faultless, and evinced that she had bestowed considerable study and thought upon the character. Miss E. Dalton spoke the lines of Jessica without regard to their meaning, and her efforts thus accompanied were of a decidedly negative character. Miss Lizzie Gale deserves a word of praise for her acting of Nerissa, and the others in the cast did not give offence. No performance was given on Thursday evening, the theatre having been closed for the purpose of rehearsing "Richelieu," which was acted on Friday and Saturday evenings in the presence of good sized audiences, Mrs. Macready acting the character of Cardinal Richelieu for the first time on any stage. All the surrounding circumstances being considered, a fair performance was given. The "Merchant of Venice" was repeated at the Saturday matinee, and with that evening's performance the season closed. Mrs. Macready and her company start at once upon a tour of the states. Their route for the coming week has already been published in the CLIPPER.

MLLE. MAD. DIOSY BOUCICAULT, who has returned to England during the past week with the artists engaged by them, as stated. They were unavoidably detained in London, Eng., and, consequently, their opening at Booth's Theatre will have to be postponed. Sept. 23d will probably be their opening date.

CHARLES FECHTER has returned from England, and work on the Fourteenth Street Theatre will now be rapidly pushed forward.

PAULINE LUCCA, Clara Louise Kellogg, Clara Doria, Herr Rubenstein, M. Wieniawski and H. C. Jarrett arrived by the Cuba. Mme Liebhart, Mlle Ormeni and M. Riemblinski, of the Rubenstein troupe, arrived by the Westphalia since our last.

A 25-CENT CHAIR OF ART arrived safely in the steamer Westphalia, during the past week, for P. T. Barnum's menagerie.

THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS continue to do a good average business in their bijou theatre in Twenty-eighth street, near Broadway. Among the prominent features of the past week's programme may be recorded C. S. Frederick's charming singing of "Don't Go, Mollie, Darling;" Gus Frederick's refrain "Dressed in a Dolly Varden;" D. S. Wambold's singing of "Little Daisy," one of the gems of the evening; Billy Birch's description of sliding on "Old Grimes' Cellar Door," old, but good, and Beaumont Read's pleasant alto voice as heard in "Mother, Bear Me to the Window." Johnson and Powers, in the olio, won much favor in their songs and dances; Billy Emmett's musical eccentricities, and the sketches of "Dr. Colton's Laughing Gas" and "The Broadway Milliners," filled out the programme.

THE STRAKOSCH CONCERTS—with the following artists—Carlotta Patti, Signor Mario, Teresa Carreno, Annie Louise Cary, Emile Sauret, Giorgio Ronconi, a grand orchestra under S. Behrens, with Signor Marzo as accompanist, are to commence at Steinway Hall this evening, Sept. 16th, and be continued on the 18th, 20th and afternoon of the 21st.

MARK SMITH returned from Europe during the past week.

IT IS SAID that G. F. BaNey and Co.'s show was in town last week, and actually exhibited somewhere near the East river, at Houston street, but it must have been a game of hide and seek, as few persons knew of their getting in here, much less of their intentions, as a studied effort seems to have been made to keep their movements quiet. Nobody was injured, we believe, in carrying away the profits.

THE RECEIPTS OF THE OLD PARK THEATRE.—As we are in possession of a portion of the treasurer's books containing an account of the nightly receipts of money at that theatre from April 18th, 1833, to April 31st, 1843, with the names of the plays acted each evening, together with marginal notes concerning the weather, and important incidents that occurred, we purpose commencing the publication, in the next issue of the CLIPPER, of a series of articles which will include not only all the above information, but such explanatory remarks as we may be able to glean from Joseph N. Ireland's valuable work, entitled, Records of the New York Stage. Our readers who have heard so much concerning the "palmy days of the drama in the time of the old Park Theatre," will, we think, find these articles of great interest, and be surprised to see what a small amount of money, on many occasions, was received when great attractions were offered.

THE UNION SQUARE THEATRE will be opened to-morrow evening, Sept. 17th, as a comedy theatre, with Sardou's new play, "Agnes," with Agnes Ethel in the title role, supported by the stock company, a list of whose names we published last week.

THE LYDIA THOMPSON BURLESQUE TROUPE have acted at Wallack's in "Ixion," preceded by the comedietta entitled "A Happy Pair," since our last report, and attracted a good attendance.

MISS HELEN TEMPLE, it is said, is to commence an engagement at Booth's Theatre on Dec. 16th, acting in John Brougham's dramatization of the story of Joan D' Arc, entitled "The Lilly of France."

GEN. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, THE Broadway, is prepared to negotiate engagements for Maffit and Bartholomew, pantomimists; the Claire Sisters, contortionists and vocalists; Mahr and McGinnis, clog dancers; Prof. G. W. Ryder and Ida Brownell, change artists, and Johanna Pritchard, who is prepared to appear in her own plays, "Abramania" and "Diamond's Daughter." He also advertises for variety performers and musicians.

LAURA KENNE, assisted by Chas Stella, vocalist, and G. Morosini, pianist, is prepared to give costume recitals on the invitation of literary and christian young men's associations. Miss Keene gave an entertainment at Kingston, N. Y., recently, which is highly spoken of by the local press, as will be seen by an extract in another column. Managers desiring to secure the lady's services can address her agent, Col. T. A. Brown.

SUDDEN DEATH AT THE THIRTY-FOURTH STREET THEATRE.—At an occasional performance given at the above theatre on Sept. 14th, Jose Villanueva so delighted the audience with his dancing that he was recalled, and while on the stage fell to the floor and died shortly thereafter. Deceased was a Cuban, thirty-two years of age, and left a family. It was believed that he died from paralysis of the heart.

MISS NEILSON is to commence an engagement at Booth's Theatre Nov. 18th, acting Juliet in "Romeo and Juliet."

GEORGE

opened here caused the piece to be handsomely furnished. Mrs. D. P. Bowers succeeds Mr. Byron on the bills for two weeks. Mr. Byron plays in Milwaukee, Wis., next (this) week, and on the 23d opens at the Olympic Theatre, St. Louis.....Miss Ada Gray has arrived in the city fresh from the Prairie wilds. She will proceed to Louisville, Ky., in a few days, where she produces her new play of 'Whose Husband?' the 30th inst.....Miss Kate Fenton arrived from England this morning.....Aiken's new Theatre will be opened on the 30th inst. The company comprises the following gentlemen and ladies:—F. E. Aiken, F. Lawior, Milton Nobles, F. R. Pierce, Geo. Reed, Chas. Graver, W. G. Crosby, Chas. Rogers, R. B. Rowland, A. M. Clerk, J. Gilsen, F. Fenton, J. F. Dean, J. Taylor, T. Rothwell, G. A. Pambroke, C. Reynolds, F. Johnson, T. Ryan, Miss Langen, Clara M. Meeker, Miss Ada Dennis, Emma Maddern, Mollie Maeder, F. Pierce, Belle Remick, Lizzie Queen, Julia Norwood, Clara Taylor, Mary Rosina, Sosie Clark, Mary Harris, Ida Foster, Emma Roberts, Mary Axtell and Mrs. Chas. Hill."

THE DRAMATIC SEASON at Leavenworth, Kansas, was opened, Sept. 9th, to fair business, the "Black Crook" being the attraction. Our correspondent, writing on Sept. 12th, says:—"The piece is very well put on the stage, the scenery and mechanical effects being fully up to the standard. E. J. Mack, as Hertzog, the Crook, was good, as was also Mr. W. Moriand as Von Puffingrutz. G. A. Lingard, as Rudolph, was acceptable. Mr. Delaney, as Greppo, was barely good enough for approval, and he should never attempt singing. The little witch, Countess Wollenstien has to say was not well spoken by J. Watson. The ruffian Gipsy, Wolfgar, was well done by Mr. Janet, who makes quite a character of this small part. Miss Anna Mack, as Carline, was deservedly encored. She possesses all that is requisite for the part, being quite youthful in appearance, and the possessor of a remarkably fine voice, which she used to advantage in the song. Ballerini's mama was passably well portrayed by Miss Lizzie Shirley, as was also Dame Barbara by Miss Hackett. Miss Anna Wood as Stalacta was good, but she seems ill at ease at times, especially in her dialogue with Rudolph. R. Honeywood as Dragonfin was good. Zamiel, the arch fiend, was fairly done by J. Neurade. The ballet, led by Ida Devere, made a most creditable appearance, and tripped the light fantastic to repeated encores. The performances of Mr. A. Hernandez were almost as attractive, and certainly as amusing, as the play itself. Young America in his burlesque of Parepa-Rosa never fails to receive a hearty encore. Prof. Hiltoft and his talking heads form no small feature of the entertainment, and are good. The proprietors, Messrs. Bidwell & McDonough, have spared no expense in getting up the scenery, and present the play in a manner which would do credit to any theatre in the country. 'The Black Crook' will be produced in Omaha, Neb., Sept. 16th, for one week.....Haverly & Denier's 'Humpty Dumpty' Troupe open Sept. 18th, for one week."

H. G. CLARKE'S DRAMATIC COMPANY played "Uncle Tom's Cabin in Chelsea, Mass., 11th, and Salem, 12th, closing Mrs. G. C. Howard's engagement, and then played Yankee Locke with "Trumps" at Lawrence, 13th, and Taunton, 14th. They are billed for Newport, R. I., 16th; Chelsea, Mass., 17th, and Manchester, N. H., 18th. Geo. W. Stanhope is ahead of the company.....Maggie Mitchell, under the management of Canning & Lowell, appears at Manchester, N. H., Sept. 20th.....Wm. Horace Lingard's Comedy Company plays in Manchester, Oct. 1st. So wrote our Manchester, N. H., correspondent, on Sept. 14th.

FROM ST. LOUIS, Mo., our correspondent, writing on Sept. 13th, forwards the appended report of amusements:—"Dramatic affairs have met with but little encouragement here during the past week, notwithstanding the prevalence of cool and invigorating weather. At De Bar's, Lillie Eldridge, in her sweet word, has been offering a change of programme. 'Nine' was given Monday and Tuesday nights; 'Migneon,' Wednesday and Thursday; Friday and for her benefit, a new play, written especially for her by McKenna, of the N. Y. Herald, entitled 'Olive,' will be produced for the first time. Miss Eldridge has endeavored in as careful a manner as possible to give satisfaction. The support by the entire company has been good. Miss Eldridge closes on Saturday night with the last named play. She goes to Louisville, Ky., for one week, and will be succeeded by Lotta, for one week, who will open in 'The Lancashire Lass.'.....At the Olympic, Johnny Thompson opened with his new specialty of 'Dixie,' which runs the week. Mr. Thompson's musical talents deserve much praise, and he responded to several encores on his numerous musical instruments. His impersonation of the chief character was almost faultless; his humor and acting making amends for the inferior acting of the play. With the support, L. F. Rand, T. Rock, W. J. Hurley, W. D. Shields, Rainforth, the Misses O'Connor, Katie Mayhew and Anna Hathaway were respectively deserving of praise. O. D. Byron opens on Sept. 16th, in 'Ben McCluskey'.....The Grand Opera House has presented through the week 'Humpty Dumpty' by the Abbott-Kirally Combination. The attendance has been fair. The clown was well acted by Mr. Abbott as was the pantaloon by Mr. Christie. The harlequin by Sig. Velarde was graceful and elastic; the columbine by Mdlle. Barretta was as joyous as the lady is pretty. The Gratz family, in their musical selections, were greatly applauded. The Abbotts end with the week and will be followed by the Chapman Sisters for two weeks."

THE CAPITOL THEATRE, Albany, N. Y., has done a good business the past week, with Baker and Farron as the principal attractions in their play of "Chris and Lena," personating two young Germans with ability. During the play they introduced numerous songs and dances, which they rendered in good style. John Jack and Miss Annie Pitman will re-appear on the 16th.....Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Albaugh and company occupied the Opera House during the past week. McCloskey's latest sensation, entitled "Poverty Fiat," was produced with the following distribution of characters:—Joe Mercer, J. W. Albaugh; Tom Flynn, J. W. Norton; Tom Blackburn, C. T. Nichols; Dave Stanton, W. H. Davis; Mr. Fallanbine, E. McCall; Ambrosia Millefleur, J. J. Riley; Gracie Fallanbee, Mrs. J. W. Albaugh; Miss Gracie Hill. On the opening night a good audience, but business fell off during the week.....John E. Owens appeared at Martin Hall on the 13th, in his celebrated character of Dr. Pangloss, in "The Heir at Law," and the time-honored "Solon Shingle." A fine audience was in attendance, and, by the applause received on Mr. Owens, proved that he still has a strong hold on the public. The company supporting Mr. O. is evidently selected with great care.....G. L. Fox and Pantomime Troupe will open at this hall on the 16th, and remain one week.

MISS DOLLIE BIDWELL commenced an engagement at the Opera House, Utica, N. Y., on the 9th inst., in "The French Spy." Our correspondent, writing on Sept. 14th, says:—"On the 10th was produced 'Cynthia,' with Miss Bidwell in the title role. On the 11th she appeared as Lady Isabel and Madam Vine in 'East Lynne.' On the 12th 'Ted,' and 'French Spy' was repeated. On the 13th Miss Bidwell received a benefit, appearing as the Pretty Panther, in the play of that name; her acting was very fine, and eclipsed all her previous efforts. She was interrupted by applause, and was three times called before the curtain. Mr. Forrester appeared to very good advantage as Cecil Strathmore. The support rendered was very good, and Messrs. Wilkes, Nicolli, Everett and Sambrook, and the Misses Smith, Parker and Watson, deserve praise for the excellent rendition of their respective characters. On the 14th Miss Bidwell closed her engagement, appearing in the title role of 'Jack Sheppard.' Mr. T. G. Riggs is announced as the next star, opening on the 16th in 'Shin Fane.'.....John E. Owens plays two nights, 17th and 18th inst., at Mechanics' Hall."

BUSINESS CONTINUED GOOD during the past week at the Royal Lyceum, Toronto, Ont., wrote our correspondent on Sept. 12th, adding that "the bill for the week consisted of Byron's burlesque of 'Mazeppa,' preceded on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings by 'Two Can Play at that Game,' which was admirably rendered by Miss Blanche Bradshaw, Messrs. Tannehill and Halford, the latter being particularly good as Capt. Arundel. In the burlesque, Frank Drew, as Cassimir, was immense, his every look and gesture being the signal for a fresh outburst of laughter, and Ali. H. Hudson was good in the role of Lavinski; W. Lloyd put forth his best efforts as Count Wallenstein, and was very successful. Dyas and Rudgiot were laughably portrayed by Messrs. Saphore and Banks; J. K. Vernon, as Thamar, was also very good, and the same will apply to J. R. Spackman's rendition of Abder Khan; as Olinska, Miss Connie Thompson displayed her fine figure to excellent advantage, and sang and danced with a vim and abandon that was perfectly irresistible. The other characters were well taken care of by the Misses Vernon, Ward, Tannehill and Whitney. The burlesque was preceded during the latter part of the week by the comedy of 'A Wonderful Woman.' 'Divorce' is announced for Sept. 16th."

THE REGULAR FALL AND WINTER DRAMATIC SEASON was inaugurated at the Griswold Opera House, Troy, N. Y., on the 11th, when the historical play of "Elizabeth" was produced, with Miss M. Isabella Pitman in the title role, supported by Mr. J. P. Winter as the Earl of Essex; Mr. J. B. Brown as King James IV; Mr. W. H. Partello as Lord Burleigh; Mr. E. F. Gilbert as Sir Francis Drake; Mr. Sam Ryan as Lord Howard; Mr. W. T. Duncan as Sir Francis Bacon; Miss May Arlington as Lady Sarah Howard; Miss Lizzie Hardy as Lady Burleigh, and Miss Nina Crolius as Marfa Lambram. Our correspondent, writing on Sept. 14th, says:—"Upon Mrs. Waller's rendition of the queen it is needless for me to comment. Suffice it to say, that it is one of her best and most successful impersonations. She was loudly applauded throughout and complimented by a call before the curtain. The support given by the new stock company was, in many respects, excellent. It is too early to speak in detail of the individual merits of the members of the stock, but it is safe to predict that Mr. Winter, leading man; Mr. Gilbert, heavy; Mr. Partello, old man; Mr. Brown, juvenile, and Miss May Arlington juvenile lady, will at once receive marks of public approval. Taken as a whole, the new company is far superior to any we have had in Troy in a number of years. 'Othello,' with Mrs. Waller as Iago, and Mr. J. P. Winter as Othello, was presented on the 12th. On the 13th, 'The Duchess of Malfi.' For the Saturday matinee Mrs. Waller appears as Meg Merriles, and in the evening 'Macbeth' will be produced, with Mrs. Waller as Lady Macbeth. On Sept. 16th Dominick Murray opens in his new drama entitled 'Escaped from Sing Sing.' The attendance thus far has been very encouraging. The new orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Phil. Miller, discourses most excellent music, and is a great improvement on those of former years."

MRS. MACREADY and her dramatic company are to perform at Lawrence, Mass., Sept. 23d; Lowell, 24th; Worcester, 25th; Hartford, Conn., 26th; Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 27th and 28th, and Albany, 30th and Oct. 1st.

FORD'S GRAND OPERA HOUSE, Baltimore, will be opened for the regular season on Sept. 23d. Among the stars announced already secured are the following:—Mrs. Chanfrau, Frederic Robinson, the Lydia Thompson troupe, J. Lester Wallack, his first appearance in that city; Furbish & Wilton's company; the Lingard comedy company; Mr. and Mrs. Dion Boucicault, Miss Jamstachek, Mrs. James A. Oates' comic opera company; G. L. Fox, and the "Humpty Dumpty" pantomime troupe; the Carlotti Patti and Signor Mario concert company; Rubenstein and his concert company; Theodore Thomas' Grand Orchestra; the Aimee French comic opera company; and Lucca, Kellogg and an Italian opera troupe.

AT THE ORO FINO THEATER, Portland, Oregon, Charles Vivian, Mddle. Marie Gangain, Ed. Montague, Mdlle. Gerretta and others, gave performances on the 30th and 31st ult. On the 1st inst., this establishment was to commence its regular season with "Macbeth," to be a new dramatic company, including G. B. Waldron, James Vinson, W. C. Crosbie, Robert Fulford, Samuel Piercy, R. H. Cox, F. Cleaves, W. B. Gortier, Elias Lipsis, Herr Ritsaldt, Charles Auker, Charles Bray, J. Roos, J. Lollor, T. Huber, C. Williams, Mrs. E. F. Stewart, Mrs. S. Fulford, Minnie Pixley, Carrie Lipsis, Mrs. Crosbie, and a Mr. Retzoldt, recently from Europe, scenic artist.

W. E. CHAPMAN has returned to the profession and is managing Mr. Ellsler's Cleveland company, supporting Jane Coombs on her western trip, opening in Detroit, Mich., Opera House, for three nights, on the 19th.

G. A. ROCON has organized a company to travel in Michigan and Canada, among the people engaged are Gabrielle McKean, Fanny Denham, W. H. Brent, W. A. Rouse, F. G. Campbell, Peter Rann, C. J. Burdett, Kitty Warren and Simeon Lee. They opened at Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 12th, producing "Rest Lynne" and "Jenny Lind."

ALBERT W. AIKEN, assisted by his company, produced "The Witches of New York" to a fair audience at the Opera House, Elmira, N. Y., Sept. 12th.

THE LADIES AND GENTLEMEN engaged for the Tremont Opera House, Galveston, Texas, are notified that the steamer City of San Antonio sails from this city on Sept. 18th, instead of the 21st, as previously advertised.

SUSAN DENIN advertises for a favorable gentleman and a juvenile lady, who can sing. She would like to hear from Eloise Bridges, if that lady is disengaged.

OF THEATRICAL AFFAIRS IN BALTIMORE, MD., our correspondent "Observer" sends the following report, dated Sept. 16th:—"A new play, a new melodrama, written by De Walden, and entitled, 'War Clouds'—a Page of History, by Our Special Correspondent,' was brought out at the Holiday Street Theatre. Its principal features may be thus briefly summed up:—

"The curtain rises upon a representation of the homestead of General Fenton, a Georgian planter, who arrives home from the north, and meets with a demonstration of welcome from his white and African farm hands. Almost simultaneously are introduced Ellery Dorrion, a young northerner; Marion D. Manfield, a reliable journalist; the Special correspondent, and Gilbert, a planter of Democracy and the Republican Party Man, who, with note book constantly in hand, is on the look-out for items relating to the impending war; Stuart Vance, a needy adventurer, and Joe Bilkins, cockney and escaped convict. The principal features of the first act are as follows:—Political discussion by all hands. Ellery Dorrion makes love to Stella, General Fenton's daughter, a high spirited fiery rather masculine young lady, who reciprocates her lover's affection, but refuses to be his should he fight against the south. Joe Bilkins discovers in Stuart Vance a detaining Liverpool clerk, and a compact is formed between them for mutual interest; Stuart Vance sees for Stella's hand, is rejected by her and her parents, who are then threatened with the execution of a mortgage on their property held by Vance. The first act terminates with an effective tableaux, in which the canonading of Fort Sumter is heard, rebel soldiers march by on their way to the seat of war, and Ellery Dorrion and Marion Fenton, son of the General, express their intentions of forming loans with their respective sections. The second act opens with the scene of a federal bivouac on the Potomac. Stella is brought in a prisoner, and falls into the power of Major Vance, who, in the absence of a federal officer, is a comfortable spy. Ella is, however, protected by General Dorrion, and finally escapes. The act ends with a battle, in which the federals are first victorious, but being surprised afterwards, all of them are robbed up. The next act represents characteristic scenes of prison life at Macon, Georgia. Stella, disguised as a boy, enters and effects the escape of General Dorrion. Our Special, and other Union prisoners. In act fourth we are taken upon a battle field, after the fray is over, and find Stella by the side of Moriand, her dying brother. Afterwards Ellery enters, severely wounded, and Stuart Vance, who has been searching for his rival, attempts to murder him, which he, of course, frustrated by the timely arrival of friends, including Our Special. In act fifth the war is over, and we are again on General Fenton's plantation. Stella is insane, her brother's death and the supposed death of her lover having been too much for her nature. Her mind is however, suddenly restored to its proper balance through the shock received by the sight of the hated Vance, who comes to claim the Fenton estates. This naturally proves no go, for Bilkins comes in and goes back on his pard in the regular style. The arrival of Ellery and Our Special makes everything serene, grab."

"The plot of 'War Clouds' is rather weak and disconnected, and many things occur therein that no account is rendered for. It is essentially sketchy in its character, and as such it is good. The scenes of camp, plantation and prison life are well drawn, there being a mercurial ity about them that makes the play really entertaining. The language is good, and the characters generally terse and idiomatic. The subject of the play is naturally a delicate one, but it has been cleverly handled. There is no very perceptible partiality for either side, and so little is said that can jar the chords of political partisanship, that but one or two fanatical geese now and then indulged in an isolated hiss. On the whole, the play is very pleasing, and may be pronounced a success. It was generally well acted, and received an elaborate setting. Mr. C. B. Bishop as Manfield, the voluble and fearless Special, made things bright and lively throughout the piece. Mr. F. A. Anderson, the veteran heavy man and impersonator of villains, made his first appearance here this season as Stuart Vance, and appeared to great advantage—if that can be said of the good acting of an odious part. Mr. J. L. Gossin rendered the role of General Ellery Dorrion with much fervor and feeling—rather too much at times, we think. Those passages about the cow need not have been delivered with such impressive pathos. Miss Rosa Rand's impersonation of Stella Penton was decidedly spirited, but perfectly true to the character. The rest of the parts were likewise generally well acted, being cast as follows:—General Penton, G. K. Fortescue; Marion Penton, Frank Wise; Bilkins, Geo. Howard; Pat Mulligan, J. L. Gallagher; Gen. Winsted, B. C. Smith; Capt. Ennis, J. Fitzpatrick; Hans, H. Meimer; Clem, W. H. Hurton; Jeff, James Kilbourne; Mrs. Penton, Mrs. F. Wise; Molly, Mrs. Lowry; Philis Stockmann and Dinah, Miss Harwood. Excellent audiences attended every representation. On Sept. 12th, the anniversary of the battle of Baltimore, an additional matinee was given, when 'The Boy Martyr; or, The Battle of Baltimore,' was presented. 'War Clouds' will be kept on for another week."

AT THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Cleveland, O., on Sept 9th, a repetition of "Woodings and Weddings" was given, and "Lost at Sea" was produced on the 10th. Our correspondent, who wrote on Sept. 12th, states that:—"The latter was finely mounted, satisfactorily rendered, and constituted the bill for the entire week. Hundreds were turned away nightly, the city being crowded with visitors to the Northern Ohio Fair. Mr. Harold Forsburg acquitted himself very creditably as Walter Coram, and Mr. Louis F. Barrett gave a good rendition of Lord Alfred Colebrook; tha Joseph Jessop of W. H. Seymour, and the Rawlings of Geo. O. Morris were also satisfactorily rendered. Mr. J. B. Curran as Mr. Franklin was very good. John Ogden as Jim Smily was laughable throughout. The Laura Franklin of Miss Laura Don was a very pretty and spicy bit of acting, and the Katy Jessop of Mrs. Estelle Potter was neatly and appropriately portrayed. Mrs. Isabella Phillips appeared as Mrs. Jessop and infused considerable life and merriment into the part. Messrs. Ben. R. Graham, Harry Lacy, W. C. Davenport, James Murray and W. N. Compston all deserve mention for the excellent manner in which they acted. The stock company go to Toledo, Ohio, on the 16th inst., to support Miss Jane Coombs, opening in 'School for Scandal,' remaining there three nights, thence to Detroit, Mich., for three nights and one matinee. Mrs. Jas. A. Oates and company are to open their season at the Academy of Music on the 18th inst., with Offenbach's comic opera, 'A Prima Donna of a Night.'"

A COLUMBINE and two gymnasts are wanted for Ventini & Kidder's pantomime troupe, which is now at the National Theatre, Cincinnati, O., where the agent, C. W. Kidder, can be addressed.

CLARA NORRIS, supported by John S. Norton and a company, will recommence her traveling season on Oct. 7th, at Albany, N. Y. The company was disbanded before on account of Mr. Norton's serious indisposition.

Musical.

THE PEAK FAMILY of vocalists and Swiss bell ringers, commenced their thirty-fourth annual tour at St. Joseph, Mich., Sept. 9th, and went thence to Benton Harbor, 10th; Muskegon, 11th and 12th; Whitehall, 13th and 14th, and Grand Haven, 16th and 17th.

"LILIAN LEE," a very pretty song and chorus, by our contributor, Arthur W. French, has just been published by Geo. W. Brown, of Chicago.

PAPWORTH'S BRASS BAND, consisting of twelve musicians, can be engaged to travel after Nov. 4th. Address R. R. Papworth, as per advertisement.

"OPEN THE DOOR" is the suggestive title of a new song and chorus, the music composed by the well-known Stephen Massett, Esq. M. Gray, music publisher, of Clay street, San Francisco, Cal., has just introduced this fresh composition to the notice of the public. The melody is pleasing, and the chorus decidedly good.

AT PACIFIC HALL, San Francisco, Cal., the Fabbri Italian and German Opera Combination appeared in a concert on Sept. 6th. The troupe was unheralded and entirely unknown, consequently the audience limited; but from their first selection, a terzetto from "Il Barbardi," their success was electric. As the manager of Drury Lane wondered how it was possible to create such a racket when Kean made his memorable London debut, so it was startling to witness the whirl of enthusiasm the devoted band at Pacific Hall expressed over the performances of the Fabbri combination. A better concert than that they gave has not been heard in San Francisco for years, says our correspondent, in his letter of Sept. 7th, stating further that:—"The baritone, Herr Jacob Muller, has a magnificent voice, and he has a perl in the depth and romance of his conceptions. Nothing could have been more fine, nor more exquisite than his rendering of Mattei's 'Non e Ver.' He is young, handsome, graceful, and will doubtless create a furore when he appears in opera. Signora Fabbri, the prima donna, has a clear, ringing voice, and a strong dramatic delivery, while the girl Anna Miller has an organ of wonderful compass, and if not strained while young, will eventually develop into a rich contralto. Both were enthusiastically applauded, and like Herr Muller, were obliged to respond to undeniable encores. The tenor, Herr Eisenbach, is strangely weak in comparison with the above singers, and presents the only flaw in the company. The troupe appear again in concert this week on Sunday, the 8th, and then remove to Maguire's Opera House, where they will produce opera, commencing on the 11th.....Mlle Anna Sonntag will inaugurate her opera season at the Metropolitan Theatre on Sept. 30th.....Miss Anna Mehlig gave a pianoforte recital at Sacramento on the 6th.....A concert will be given at Pacific Hall next week for the benefit of Miss Emmie Watson, for whom the musical talent of the city have volunteered to appear."

MISS JULIA RIVE is billed to concertize at College Hall, Cincinnati, on the 16th.

MISS LAURA WOOLWINE, a promising young Cincinnati soprano, has just started to Italy, to perfect her lyrical education.

A NEW musical association has been formed at Boston, Mass., with the title of Beethoven Quintette Club, and it proposes giving a series of concerts shortly.

THE HARVARD SYMPHONY CONCERTS are to be of especial interest at the Hub this year, the first of the series occurring October 10th, in Music Hall.

TREMONT TEMPLE, Boston, Mass., will be re-opened on Tuesday, Sept. 24th, with a concert, at which the Mendelssohn Quintette Club open their 24th season, assisted by Signor Vincenzo Cerillo, a new baritone; Edith Abel, M. W. Whitney—both of whom make their first appearance since their return from Europe; Chas. Hamon and R. Fanning.

REYNOLDS' POPULAR ORCHESTRA of Auburn, N. Y., have taken up their residence at Elmira, N. Y., and become members of Up De Graff's 110th Regimental Band. The orchestra is a fine one and Elmira people are very proud of their accession to the above named band.

A PIANIST is wanted to travel with the colored Canaan Jubilee Singers. Address Edward Burroughs, care of this office.

HENRY FEHLING, leader of orchestra, advertises for an engagement.

JOE. EATON RUSSELL, long connected with the Berger Family is billed to give one of his new monological entertainments in Peoria, Ill., on Sept. 17th. He is to be assisted by Mr. James H. Stewart, pianist and composer. He goes hence to Knoxville, 18th; Galesburg, 19th and 20th; Young America, 21st; Monmouth, 23d; Canton, 24th; Lewistown, 25th; Beardstown, 26th; Winchester, 27th, and Jacksonville, 28th. Mr. F. A. Watson is in advance.

J. NICHOLAS GOODALL, violinist and pianist, can be addressed as per advertisement.

Variety Halls.

GEO. W. CHARLES, female impersonator, whose address is care of this office, can be engaged for the fall and winter season.

JOHN T. SANGSTER, clog dancer, professionally known as Bobby Sangster, died recently at the residence of his father, at Checktowaga, near Buffalo N. Y., at the age of 21 years. During the year 1869, on the occasion of the benefit of W. H. Southard, at the Academy of Music, Buffalo, he competed with others for a gold medal offered by the beneficiary, and the championship of Buffalo, both of which he won and held until the day of his death.

MRS. ELIZA ANN SCOTT, the mother of Miss Elise Scott, danseuse, died at Bailey Station, Jefferson county, Mo., Sept. 4th, of paralysis.

THE GUY FAMILY, variety performers, who can be addressed care of this office are prepared to accept engagements on sharing terms.

ARTISTS OF ABILITY are wanted for the Metropolitan Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo. Address T. V. Day, as per advertisement.

AT THE METROPOLITAN THEATER, St. Joseph, Mo., Harry Thompson and Mary Olive were to have opened on Sept. 9th. The Lemont brothers are announced to appear on the 16th, and the Barlow brothers about the 30th; Nellie Edwards and Harry Hart closed on the 14th, going to KANSAS CITY.

LING LOOK and his bother, Yamadeva, can be engaged for their feats of magic and contortion acts. Address as per advertisement.

HARRY HOSKER, sand dancer, vocalist, &c., whose address is care of this office, can be engaged.

AT SHELBY'S COMICS, Buffalo, N. Y., crowded houses have been the rule during the past week. The only arrival on the 6th was Mlle Fontainebleau, who opened her second engagement under the most favorable auspices, and received a flattering reception. Later in the week little Ella Love appeared in her clog dances and songs. Mr. James Keene has become a favorite in his banjo solos. The acts of Wyn and Rose, Boys, by Chambers and Edwards; the songs of Miss Butler, and the sketch of "Can't Shake Him Off," met with favor. The bill concluded with Mr. Frayne's drama of "A Sailor's Love," which was ably portrayed by the author and company. Neil Rogers closed on the 14th, and goes to Welch's, Detroit, for four weeks. Mr. W. T. Delaney, actor and author, opens on the 16th. The drama of "Rick of the Woods" will be produced the same night. The following people will appear on the 23d:—Courtwright and Gilbert, Hattie Forrest and Leona Dare.

ROBERTS' COMBINATION, the largest variety troupe that has visited Louisville, Ky., for some time, opened at Masonic Temple, Sept. 9th, and have met with deserved success. The programme is varied and entertaining, and shows that Manager Roberts knows what will please our theatre-goers. The Tyrolean Troupe, four males and three females, sing very sweetly and are repeatedly encored. Prof. Inchmannder gives a very pleasing performance on the zither and lumbiermolcon. Miss Florence, a serio-comic vocalist; the sonavo drill of Sergeant Bell; Billy Pastor's comic songs, and the fancy dance of Frank Kent, were all good. The feature of the performance was the superb dancing of Mlle. Lupo, who certainly deserves high praise. Her "Lupo Galop" and "Medritena" were immense, and she was recalled four times. The company remain here three weeks, additional novelties being presented each week. So wrote our correspondent on Sept. 11th.

CARRIE AVERY is requested to send her address to Dan Shelby, who advertises to that effect.

OF CINCINNATI VARIETY BUSINESS our correspondent reports, up to the 13th, as follows:—"The National Theatre, under the management of E. D. Davies, opened for the season on Monday last. The programme commenced with the sketch, 'Military Tactics,' which was laughably performed by John Feely, Mark Hughes and Gustavus Foster. Jennie Gilmer, who came next, gave a budget of songs, which were taken kindly. Master Willie Gaylord succeeded her in a very good contortion act, and he, in turn, was followed by Helene Smith in a new song and dance, 'Blue Eyed Joe.' The lady has a sweet, though not strong voice, and her dancing is very graceful. J. W. Marks' Irish songs and dances, which came next, made a tempestuous hit, particularly in the upper galleries. The Weston Sisters, prettily costumed, were next on in songs and dances, which were not so much as Miss Smith, in that, that their pieces were hackneyed ones, already done repeatedly by male performers, and consequently their reception was a little subdued, but was warmer after the first night. Mlle Zulelia and Mons. Ventini next came out in their trapeze act, the lady's handsome face and figure exhibiting to advantage in her slow descent. The Irish sketch, 'Barney's Courtship,' by Barney Gilroy, orders, as rendered and acted by William Carleton and Jenny Gilmer, was well relished. Another farce, which was, perhaps, de trop, was then given by Pemsley, Hughes and Foster, after which Helene Smith danced well, and Zulelia and Ventini appeared in their very skilful hat spinning. Annie McIntyre followed in a clever jig. Pemsley and Hughes in excellent character songs and dances, each took immensely, and then came, as a wind-up, the pantomime, 'When the Cat's Away the Mice Will Play,' with Andy Morris as clown, who is good; and Ventini, Gaylord, Foster, Mack and Zulelia in the other characters. Biz has been barely fair. The theatre has been re-painted and re-fitted, and looks brighter than for years. E. D. Davies appears Monday.....There have been no withdrawals from the Race Street company this week, and business is holding fully up. Nellie Holloway, vocalist, who has been favorably received. The Can-can has been once more put on, with Belle Helene as Frailty. The Georgia Sisters, Jimmy Dalton and P. H. Seamon, the last recruits to the company, continue to meet with favor. Seamon is engaged for Pittsburgh, Sept. 30th. Johnny Weaver closes early next week to go to Memphis. Harry Wilkinson joins on Monday. Good house changes are the only changes at the Pacific Garden this week have been the closing of Johnny Smith and Mollie Somers, who have gone to Nashville. Prof. Marsh, juggler and fire swallower, is to open to-night (Friday.).....The Sycamore Street Varieties has closed.....At the Olympic Theatre the additions this week have been M. J. Griffin and Harry Wilkinson, Adelaide Julia Bartley and Rosalie. Wilkinson remains but the week, playing next week at the Race Street Varieties. Prof. Lawrence, who closes next week under engagement for Cleveland, had a benefit last night, at which Mr. Fox volunteered, and played a burlesque on 'Rip Van Winkle.' The rest of the company remains as mentioned last week."

HARRY LEAVITT is requested, through an advertisement, to send his address to Charley Shay.

LUCY ADAMS, at present performing at Fox's American Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., is highly spoken of by the press of that city, as will be seen by extracts published in another column.

FIRST CLASS TALENT is wanted for the Athenæum Theatre, Keokuk, Iowa. Address J. S. Wulff, as per card elsewhere.

THE HENRI FAMILY, variety performers, now at the Metropolitan Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., where they can be addressed, will be at liberty to accept engagements after Dec. 1st.

MANAGERS are cautioned, through a card in another column, against infringing on Miss Annie Adams' copyrighted songs, by allowing them to be sung.

AT THE WALNUT STREET THEATRE, Kansas City, Mo., on Sept. 9th, the new appearances were Maud Le Moine, danseuse and vocalist; Billy Devere, comic singer; a little Miss, who sings under the cognomen of Little Dot; Fred. Ritchie, an excellent Dutch comedian, and Tom Cassidy, whose eccentric make-up makes his song and dance a decided success. The bill was changed on Monday, Sept. 16th, and will remain one week.

HARRY LEAVITT and Nellie Edwards return on the 16th. While the Lamonte Brothers were doing a trapeze act on Monday evening, Dan Lamonte fell from the top bar and, striking upon his hands, both wrists were badly sprained. The friends of the favorite vocalist, Maud De Lisle, whose life has been despaired of the past two weeks, will be pleased to hear that she is slowly recovering. Mr. Carroll's company, from the Walnut, have closed their engagement at Quincy, Ill., and are playing in Atchison, Kansas, this week. So wrote our correspondent on Sept. 11th.

AT BROOM'S OPERA HOUSE, Memphis, Tenn., on Sept. 9th, the new appearances were Green and Saddler, Nellie, Lizzie and Richard Robinson. The first mentioned are clog dancers and song and dance men, and have already gained a good deal of favor. The three Robinson children are novices, but they are clever in their songs and dances. Courtright has gone to New Orleans, and Johnny Nichols fills his old place on the end.....The Olympic opens about September 23d.

DAN SHELBY, having leased Barton's Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y., the Courier, of Sept. 9th, comments as follows upon the undertaking:—

BARTON'S OPERA HOUSE.—Within the past few months Mr. Barton has been expending both time and money, and the improvements have added greatly to the beauty of the hall. The scenery, acoustic properties, and method of heating and ventilation have been greatly attended to, placing it as to every condition, if not better, than any hall in the country. Mr. Dan Shelby, the popular proprietor of the Comique of that city, has leased the opera house and will open about the 9th of November with a troupe of performers that have been selected, each being a satellite in his or her orbit, of the first magnitude.

Mr. Shelby, as a manager, has proved himself a success, and has been successful in always employing those just the best artists. Decorum and order are the only requirements that he expects from the audience, and he will assuredly please them. His genial spirit and affability have won the respect and admiration of a host of friends in this city, who join in wishes for his future success and prosperity. "Come on Dan."

LA PETITE CHARLOTTE, a juvenile premiere of the St. Felix ballet Troupe, commences an engagement at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh, Pa., on Sept. 23d, and the family, who can be addressed care of this office, can be engaged after Oct. 7th.

PERFORMERS are wanted for the Varieties, Williamsport, Pa. See advertisement.

JIM WHEELER, boy club swinger and Ethiopian comedian, wants engagements. His address is care of this office.

FIRST CLASS ATTRACTIONS are always wanted by Wm. E. Sinn for the theatres under his control. For particulars see card in another column.

ED BANKER, change artist at present performing at Aim's American Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa, commences an engagement at Tony Pastor's Opera House, this city, on Sept 23d.

AT BERRY'S OPERA HOUSE, Wilkesbarre, Pa., Turner and Forrester, double song and dance artists, appeared on Sept. 9th, and met with success. They open at Fox's American Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., on Sept. 23d. On the 16th the Harrison sisters, three in number; Jenny Lamont, Milly Leonetta, Jemmy Quin, Charles Burnham and Master Berry make their first appearances. Harry Lester, English comique; Tom Turner, banjo soleist, and Harris, Dan Guilfoil, Dora Gonzales, and Den and Lilly Howe, have been the reigning attractions. On the 16th will appear Fannie May, serio-comic vocalist and danseuse, Harry Blanchard, impersonator of female characters, and Willie Fox, Dutch comedian. The Rawley brothers, song and dance men, and Ethiopian delineators, are announced to appear on the 23d.

THE NEW FACES at the Front Street Theatre Comique, Baltimore, Md., on Sept. 9th, were Miss Iona Lang, a fair serio-comic vocalist, who dresses handsomely, and the Romelli family, four in number—one a female—acrobats and gymnasts. One of their acts, termed the "Berceau de Fer," is a reckless and really admirable performance. Two ballet divertissements, called the "The Dolly Varden" and "The Pearl of the Sea," were freely rendered by Miss de Rosa and the corps de ballet. The programme terminated with the comic drama entitled, "Baltimore by Gaslight," principal parts taken by S. K. Chester, Sam Devere, B. S. Hodges, E. Collier and Miss Lillie Hall. An additional matinee was given on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 12th, the anniversary of the battle of North Point. Business has been good. Bobby Newcomb, Miss Lizzie Leroy and the Misses Dolly, Lena and Bessie Warren are announced to open on Sept. 16th.....The Baltimore Opera House has been well patronized the past week. The fresh appearances on Sept. 9th were the Daly boys, two good clog and double song and dance performers; Johnny Manning, an acceptable vocal character change artist, and Miss Aline Le Favre. The principal feature of the bill was the local drama, "The Girls of the Period," written especially to draw out Miss Le Favre's peculiar talents, who sustained the leading role. This lady, who is the happy possessor of superb physical endowments, indulges in a certain suggestive style of songs, dances and poses, that vividly recalls sweet memories of the Nubile and the Closeries de Lilas. The Collyer boys and the Gorsenio sisters close to-day, the former going to the Washington Theatre Comique, and the latter to Tony Pastor's, New York.....At the Odeon Varieties, Pat Murphy, an excellent Irish comedian and vocalist, opened on Sept. 13th. Ben Hayes took a benefit on the 13th, numerous volunteers and auditors gracing the occasion. Leo Gordon and Ben Hayes close Saturday. St. George and Gibbons are announced for the 16th. Business fine, as it has been, in fact, ever since Dan Howard assumed the management. The ever popular Gertrude Hall, J. H. Milburn that of Peter Spyke; James Doud as appeared in his specialties, and the whole concluded with the time worn farce of "Forty Winks," in which Ada Johnson played the landlady, J. W. Wesley the lodger and J. Wilson the mischievous monkey. The performers announced for the 16th are E. L. Davis and his troupe of performing dogs; Viola Crawford, vocalist, and the Bolyer Brothers, clog dancers. Closing on the 14th were Miss Marion Taylor, with no immediate engagement; Lulu Delmay, who goes to the Opera House, Baltimore, Md., and J. H. Milburn, who goes to Chicago, Ill. Miller Beale was discharged on the 11th.....At the Metropolitan Variety Theatre the new faces on the 9th inst., were Jo Hodges, Lillie Price
